GREAT CURE FOR DYSPEPSIA! ANOTHER SCIENTIFIC WONDER.

DR J. S. HOUGTON'S PEPSIN! The True Digestive Pauld, or Gastric Juice ! Prepared from Rennet, or the fourth stomach of the Ox, after directions of Baron Libby, the great

Physiological Chemist, by J. S. Houghton, M. D., Philodelphia, Pa. This is a great Natural Remedy for Indigestion, and Dyspepsia, curing siter Nature's own Method, by Nature's own Agent the Gastrie Juice. Pepsia is the chief stateent, or Great Digesting Principle of the Gastrie Jules- the Solvent of the Food, the Purifying, Priserving, and Stimulating Agent of the Stomech and Intestines It is extracted from the Digestive Stomech of the Ox, thus forming as Artificial Digistive Fluid, precisely like the natural Gastrie Juice, in its chemical powers, and furnishing a complete and perfect substitute for it. By the aid of this preparation, the pains and evils of indigestion and Dyspepsia are removed just us they would be by a reality Stomach. It is doing wonders for Dyspepties curing cases of debility, emaciation, nervous decline and Dyspeptic consumption, sup-posed to be on the verge of the grave. The Scien-tific Evidence spen which it is based, is in the highest degree curious and remarkable. Baron Leiebig, in his celebrated work on Animal Chemistry, says: "An Artificial Digestive Fluid, analogous to the Gastrie Juice, may be prepared from the mucous membrane of the stomach of the Ox, in which various articles of food, as ment an 1 e22s, will be softened, changed, and digested, just in the same manner as they would be in the human stomach." ## A DOCTOR'S FEES.

A young woman residing in the Rue de Breda bad occusion, some time ago, to send for a Ductor, on finding herself somewhat se-riously indisposed. The Doctor at the moment had not many patients on his list. He had killed off the most trouble some of them, the evening before a nevertheless, just to keep up appearances, he took his time in present-ing himself to his new victim.

She awaited him the picture of resignation. Her pretty head, heavy with fever, was buried deeply in a rile of pillows daintily trimmed with lace. Her lip was parched—her check flushed. The Doctor came says, and pitied, and vowed that he would restore her, as soon as might be, to the elegances and enjoyments of life in Paris; and by way of kerping his vow, threw science overboard, for the nonce. for the nance.

In less than a formight, thanks to Nature's aid and the Faculty's abstinence, the fair patient was about again. She received the Doctor in her bondoir, and advancing to meet him immediately that he was announced, exclain ed-"You have saved me; Doctor: many thanks, and for your trouble you may his me-un the forehead !"-and with these words abo manœuvred so modestly and so coquettishly, that the worthy Doctor's kies was lost in air.

"That's a sort of fee on which I sha'nt get rich," said the Doctor to himself, with a smile, as he returned home. "But never mind;

I've done a good deed; Pve cured a very pretty woman, and that makes some amends." Some time afterwards, when his good deed and his charming patient had alike slipped from his memory, he received a call from a young man, a stranger to him, but of distinguished figure and gentlemanly manners.-"Sir," said the young man, "you were good enough to attend and cure of the Rue de Bredn. I have called to pay the pecuniary debt incurred, and on her behalf to renew her most grateful acknowledgment.39 So saying, he gracefully took leave, depositing on the Doctor's mantel-piece a rouleau of a hundred five-trans pieces.

"Assuredly," said the doctor, "virtue never loses its reward; though I have not hitherto had much faith in the proverb."

The next day, a gentleman, bald, but wear-ing several Orders, presented himself in turn, Sir," said he to he Doctor, "I am under the deepest obligation to you for the care which you so kindly took of Madame * * * of the Rue de Breda; here are the fifteen louis which she owes you." He bowed, and took leave. "The deuce is in it," thought the Doctor, "this is very embarrassing. If I tell him that I have been paid already, I shall perhaps commit a very serious indiscretion. It will never do, to trouble the peace of mind of this worthy gentleman." On the third day, an Englishman, not long arrived, insisted on instant admission.

"My dear Doctor," said he, shaking him violently by the arm, and speaking in his droll insular patols, "I am very much obliged to you for havi g restored to me madame.

He went accordingly, and told her gally.

and in due order of date, all that had happened. "You know, Madame," added he, a Doctor is bound to keep secrets like a confecsor, which is the reason why I thought it inexpedient to opter into an explanation with these gentlemen. But I have come to restore you what belongs to ven."

The young dome looked surprised, and blushed and then neswered in her softest and most insinuating tone. "Good heavens, Doctor, I scarcely know what you mean; but I assure you that you will seriously affront me by insisting. Have you not amongst your patients some poor souls in need of help?—They will be very grateful to find that you have been their treasurer. Go, then. Doc tor; cure them as you cured me, and for this once you may give me a kiss-upon the

You may say that this money took a round-about way of reaching its charitable destina-tion. But notwithstanding abuse of all cores is so lavishingly bestowed on money, the great affair in this world is to draw it out of its hiding-places and put it in circulation.
