DR J. S. HOUGTON'S PEPSIN! The True Digestive Fluid, or Gastric Julee ! Prepared from Rennet, or the fourth stomach of the Ox, after directions of Baron Liebig, the great Physiological Chemist, by J. S. Houghton, M.

D , Philadelphia, Pa.
This is a great Natural Remedy for Indigestion, and Dyspensia, curing after Nature's own Methed, and Dyspepsia, curing after Nature's own Method, by Nature's own Agent, the Gastric Juice. Pepsin is the chief alternat, or Great Digesting Principle of the Gastric Juice—the Salvent of the Pood, the Purifying, Preserving, and Stimulating Agent of the Stomach and Intestines. It is extracted from the Digestive Stomach of the Ox, thus forming an Artificial Digestive Fluid, precisely like the natural Gastric Juice, in its Chemical powers, and farmishing and perfect substitute for it. By ing a complete and perfect substitute for it. By the aid of this preparation, the pains and evils of in-digestion and Dyspepsia are removed just as they would be by a healthy Stomach. It is doing wonders for Dyspenics, curing cases of debility, emaciation, nervous decline and Dyspenile consumption, supposed to be on the verge of the grave. The Scientific Evidence upon which it is based, is in the highest degree curious and remarkable.

Baron Leichig, in his celebrated work on Animal Chemistry, says: "An Artificial Digestive Fluid, analogous to the Gastric Juice, may be prepared from the mucous membrane of the stomach of the Ox, in which various articles of food, as ment and eggs will be softened, changed, and digsoled, just in the some manner as they would be in the human stomach." Haif a tenspoonful of pure PEPSIN, infused or disolved in water, will digest or dissolve Fire Pounds

Dr Houghton's Pepsin, is sold by nearly all the dealers in fine drugs and Popular Medicine, throughout the United States. It is prepared in Powder, and in Pivid form—and in Prescription vials for the use of Physicians. Private Circulars, for the use of Physicians, may be obtained of Dr Houghton or his Agents, descri-bing the whole process of preparation and giving the authorities upon which the claims of this new remedy are based. As it is not a secret remedy, no objection can be raised against its use by Physicians in respectable standing and regular practice. Price in Fluid form, One Dollar per bottle.

PAULINE;

THE GRATEFUL MONARCH

BY PERCY & MT. JOHN.

Pauline was an orphan, adopted by some worthy citzen of the Rue St. Honore, Paris, who having brought har up to the age of sixteen, had placed her in his shop—a perfome warehouse—to dispense his goods at the counter. Worgen in France are simple universally the practical heads of commercial establishments. The master of the horses establishments. The moster of the house when he does not lounge away in a cafe, plays billiards or earca half the day, or walks about like one living on his means, is contented to orcupy a dignified and retired position, attending, not to sales, but to wholesale purchases. But such was not the case with M. chases. But such was not the case with M. Boulard, the adopted father of Pauline.—Both he and his wife shared the labors of his shop together—he keeping the books, while Pauline and Madame Boulard attended to the details. The young girl was very pretty had very modest, and her presence contributed not a little to the success of the business. The good couple having no children of their own, had manifested their intention of making Pauline their heiress, and this added to the Pauline their heiress, and this added to thu charm which hung over the perlumer's Pauline had many lovers, a great many-as ladies who are presty, modest, and victuous, are apt to have, especially when rich; for although the world is not, half so selfish and wicked as certain persons lancy, yet a grain of interested love will allways peep out a-mong the truest suitors. Two lovers were chiefly assiduous in their attentions; the one n rich shop-keeper of the same street; the other a poor frotteur. Both were young, tolerably good-looking, and very devoted in their attachment; and it would have been hard to say which was the most deserving.

But Monsieur Elexis Laprant was rich, and Jean Provost was poor. If will be readily understood that the parents of Pauline would not have hesitated in their choice, but they knew only of the affection of Elexis; that of Jean was concealed even from himself.-Alexis came often to the house under one pretence or another, and was always favorably received. The good Boulards were highly fattered at his presence. Pauline liked his frenk, open manner, and always greeted him with a smile. The frotteur—one who waxes and shines, by means of rubbing, the wooden floors and rooms-came to the house in the exercise of his trade. He always bowed low to Pauline, asked how she was, and even on her fete day had brought a single rose, which was graciously received. Jean was also a commissioner and ran on errands had often Sent by Mail, Free of Postage.

For convenience of sending to all parts of the country, the Digestive matter of the Pepsin, is put up in the form of Powder, with directions to be dissolved in water by the restant. These Providers can be dissolved in water by the restant. solved in water by the patient. These Powders contain just the same matter as the boules, and will be gentle and respectful were his tones, and how little he concented his happiness if she gave him a good natured word. Pauline could scarcely be blind to the open love of Elexis, or the concented affection of the poor frotteur; but however this may be, she said nothing, and appeared to notice neither. But young Laparant had spoken to M. Boulard, and he to his wife, and his wife to the young girl; but she kissed her adopted mother so NEW GOODS.

ful; he dared not even thick of making an offer; he a poor workman, with uncertain means of livelihood, and so far beneath the position of her he loved! Had she been an unfriendly orphan, without home, he would have joyfully offered his heart, and the only fortune he had-his honest labor. While thus depressed an event occurred that drove Pauline out of his thoughte.

One day he was sent for to wax the floors of a house near the Palais Royal, the apartments of which were generally devoted to the pleasure parties of the courtiers. Jean who was so well known and trusted, was told happiness. Jean had seen them often before, but they had never affected him so much; and, forgetting home, place, and his duties, he leaned on the stick which held the wax, and fell into deep meditation. Suddenly he was startled by voices in the next room; a horrible sentence caught his ear, and justi-fied his listening. Pale and terrified, he harkened to every word, and moved not for fear of being discovered. He had discovered an awful and frightful secret; and he was a dead man if found in that room, the ill-jointed wainscot of which allowed every thing in the next room to be distinctly heard.

"What shall I do?" thoughthe to himself:
"to-morrow is the fete of St. Louis. I have no time to lose." Jean left the room on tip-too, and with the uterest caution; then descending the stairs, feigned to leave for dinner. No somer was he clear of the house than he made for the prefecture of police, and entering the hotel, asked to see the lieutowant. The servant replied that he could not be seen. It was one o'clock, and the fashionable dinner hour of that day—now six hours later. Not a vallet dare disturb M. de Bellisle from his meal; but

Jean insisted, stormed and implored and at last as they seized him by the shoulder to pitch him out, eried:

'Do not drive me out, I must see Monsieur. de Belliele; the king's life is in danger.'
