NEUSE RIVER BRIDGE.

We learn that the Tress Work at the Nense River Bridge, about 900 feet, which was destroyed by fire, has all been replaced, and that the Cars run to the River, and the detention does not exceed 15 or 20 minutes. The Bridge will be in readiness by the first of August.

We mention these fac's that the public may know the precise state of things, and not be im-posed upon by rumors inculcated by interested persons, whose object is to build up other operations by misrepresentations relative to this.

The President and Directors of the Road are entitled to great credit, for the promptitude and dispatch with which they have managed the rebuilding and repairs rendered necessary by the late fire-and we are satisfied that all will be completed at a much earlier period than could at first have been reasonably anticipated.

SHARP SAYINGS.

The Southern Standard, Charleston, of Tuesday last informs that Edmund Bellinger, Esq. engaged in a discussion at Clinton, on the 4th inst. said that "if the commercial interests of the city of Charleston were a clog to the State, then he agreed with Capt. Allen, that we had better make a second Moscow of the city." Such expressions show how utterly unfit some of the leaders in South Carolina are, to manage the grave affairs of the times. We would as soon put ourselves under the lead of the veriest madman or idiot, as under the direction of men so calleus to the claims of humanity ; so profoundly ignorant of the character of mankind. These are, indeed, evil days, when a public man can be even permitted to utter such sentiments in a civilized community. These are they who are destroying the future hopes of the South, by driving from the southern ranks all prudent and just men; men who would shrink from no honorable peril, but who would turn with disgust from the side of phrenzied zealots. We trust the good people of South Carolina will become mensible of the deep inpury such things are doing them everywhere, and institute a reform and gut such men out of the lead in the State. History teaches us that these "Furiosos" are not to be depended upon in the hour of danger. Should they ever be brought to the test, we venture to predict that the gentlemen here named will be very careful to call in the aid of wisdom at the last ninch, and keep as much as possible out of the range of those mischievous things, called shots and shells. Their tongues wag bravely at the festive meeting, but this is not a circumstance to the showing off they will do, when the "vile guas" shall become clamorous. "Oh, how they'll make their trofters play !"

The Whig State Convention of Ohio, at their late session, nominated Gen. Resolutions were passed approving of the improvement of our rivers and harbors by the General Government; opposition to encroachments by the Executive power, and a paramount regard to the Constitution and the Union.

MR. WEBSTER AND THE COMPROMISE.

Mr. WEBSTER, on a late occasion, while speeking of the Compromise of the last session of Congress, declared that if the North wilfully set aside that part of the Constitution, the South would their neighborhood, whom they allow for it 19 not be bound by this compact. If we understand a 20 cts. a cana, containing seven quarts. WY. WEBSTER, he considers the Constitution a compact, which, when broken by any one of the parties is not binding on the other. We think this is correct-and now if any one can tell us how a State, severeign or not sovereign, can commit treason for not doing what she is not bound to do, we will be very much obliged to him.

GEN. JACKSON'S OPINIONS.

The Standard is laboring to prove that Gen. JACKSON was favorable to State Sovereignty, and consequently in favor of the doctrine of the right of secession. You may as well quit that, friend HOLDEN, for you will find it an up-hill business. This is designed to establish the notion that the Democrats ever have been and are quite sound on this point; that they have been consistent from | hill work on the 19th of April 1775. time immemorial. Speaking of his own State, Mr. Buchanan says She is emphatically the Keystone of the Union. For my single self (single, because a bachelor pro tem) I have just acturned from a week's absence in that scene of ancient revolutionary spirit and good modern milk, the little town of Lexington Mass. Lexington has not changed her character as a purely agricultural town, for in her case the production of milk is not (as in this vicinity) a manufacturing business.

She abounds in large apple orchards and pastures, and her stock farms, not surpassed by any in New England, furnish a great portion of the. excellent milk which is used in Boston, whither it is taken every morning in numerous one horse carts and dealt out at five cents a quart to regular customers at their own doors. The milk men usually have farms of their own, but every evening they collect much more of other farmers in

The "milk routes" are not owned by companics but by many different individuals, and the "good will" of a first rate set of customers, is regarded as a saleable property, and marketable at from $1,000 to $2000. A route, on which 37 quart canns of milk are retailed daily, usually produces a clean annual profit of $1,000.

In New York, the milk business is conducted by companies who keep thousands of cows in a single building, and feed them without pasturage. on distill house slops, which produces large quantities of niilk, entirely innocent of cream, and very deleterious in quality.

How these children and the printers escaped death is most miraculous, more especially the latter, who were not more than two yards from that part of the wall shattered by the passage of the fluid. It was most providential.

The single conductor on the front of the building is fully proved by this accident insufficient to protect it, and no doubt the Board of Directors will immediately see the defect remedied. At a recent "Woman's Rights" convention held at Akron, Ohio, Mrs. Swisshelm offered the following sensible resolutions, which were, of course, rejected.

1. That woman's rights are inseparably con nected with her duties; and that in asking for her greater freedom, we desire no emancipation from any duty of wife, mother, daughter, sister or friend.

2. so much injury to the cause of Southern Rights is still in flippant use by the extremists. The reproofs which follow it are not confined to people of other States, but there is quite a gathering up of spirit and independence of feeling within South Carolina, in this matter; and the ultras may take to themselues the blame, if there be any, that they will be efficiently opposed on their own eases, since the 21st of June. Alas! for the poor sons of Carelina who are born to such mental obtuseness-who are inheritors of a submissive spiritwhose information is so imperfect and judgment so unsound, that when measured by so elevated a standard as the more radiant genius and lofty courage of their opponents disclose, they should exhibit such diminutive proportions.
