A STORY FOR BOYS

ST JOHN P. RODGERS

On just Wednesday afternoon—emai the melting snow and an overplus of mud, there came into Borough a lad, with quite an in-our telligent countenance and proposessing aphis movements indicated that he was a fravel-ler, wore and fatigued. With an air of consciouindependence, which not even the loneliness of his situation or the inclemency of the weather through which he had manful y braved his way could either crush or subdue, he coursed the he entered the bar-room of Mann's Hotel, and seated himself by the comfortable store. A tear, unbidden, started out of his deep blue eye, and coursed its unchecked channel down his ruddy cheek, as if it were a lingering dew drop that told of happier days gone by, whose presence might bedew his bounding heart no more forever-as his future prospects became dim in his innocent entryso artless and so unsuspecting -into the arena of life's warfare.

His situation exciting the attention of Capt. Mann and one or two other gentlemen who were present, they questioned him concerning his journey; and received his unswers in an honest polite way, that won for him the sympathy of all who listened.

What is your name? David Reed, eir. Where do you live?

I live in Newark, New Jersey. My father was a tanner and currier; while he lived, Prepared from Rennet, or the fourth stomach of the | we all got a long comfortably; but he was suddenly taken off by the cholera, and left his family poor.'

How old are you, David ? 'Not quite fourteen years, sir." When did you leave home?

I left home last Friday and went to Morristown in search of a place, but could not obtain one, and from thence I went to Easton, and then down Doyleston." Did you walk all the way ?

Yes, with the exception of about three miles.—I was out in all that severe storm.— When I got to Easton my shoes were entirely worn out, and I caught a severe cold by being wet and chilly.' 'Had you any money when you started?'

'Yes. My mother gave me four shiftings; t was all the money she had. I did not want to take it from her, but she made me do so. She has always been very kind to me, and she told me to go and get a place .-I have made up my mind to seek my own fortune, and whatever I make I will send home to help to keep her.

Have you any brother ? I have no brothers, but I have five sisters, all at home with my mother.'

I will go to Philadelphia, and try to get a place at harness making, if I can, and if I do not succeed, why I must try my hand at something else, Are you not afraid thus to start alone?

Where do you intend to go ?

No. sir. I know if I behave myself, that I will always find friends wherever I go. Well, David, are you a whig or a demo-

I am a Washington boy. I believe in him because he won the liberty of my coun-David, did you ever drink anything?
'No, sir. I belong to the Temperance band, and signed the pledge never to drink any liquor, and I don't intend to." Did you ever go to school?'

Not much, sir. I always went to Sunday

'Do you know any body in Philadelphia?'

I have an mode living there, but I do not know exactly what place he is at. The open, frank and confiding manner in which he answered every question, elicits the admiration of every one present, and a collection was at once taken to recruit his exhausted funds. Two gentlemen took him out and generously procured him a pair of shoes, which he most sadly needed; and in a from what he was when he came in. His looks were those of honesty-his manners indicated a firmness of resolution and a power of self-reliance that were truly commendable in one so young. Alone and poor, with no recommendation save the noble signet and stamp of worth, which nature had placed upon his brow-accompanied but by a mother's parting blessing—earth for his herst-age—the world for his labors—etare for his companions-strangers for his friends-fearless and hopeful as he began his pilgrimage of life-unknown and pnaided, save by the kindly hand of a benign Providence, that will guard his infant footsteps, and protect him in his hours of trial. A printer went, long years ago, to the same city, and wan-dered up Market street with a loaf of bread under his arm, in search of employment.-Time sped on, and he became the honored The clothier boy now wields the helm of our Republic. The mill boy of the slashes still holds listening Senutors entranced by as he is of the adventures of Plymouth-the hardy pioneers of the West, who have borne the banner of civilization and progress far over the Missouri wilds, and amid the hills of Minnesota.
