IS AN UMBRELLA PROPERTY Punch told the story some years ago, of man who louned an umbrella to a friend tradesman, in the street, on a wet many day, it was not returned, and on another wat, disagreeable day, he called for it but found, his friend at the door going out with it in his hand.

"I've come for my umbrella," exclaimed the loaner.

"Cant help that," exclaimed the borrow-er, "don't you see that I am just going out

"Well-yes," replied the lonner, a ed at such cutrageous impudence "y but what am I to do?"

"Do?" replied the other, to be threw the top and walked off; "do? Do as 1 d

A TRUE STORY.

A lady from the "lar, far west," with her husband, awakened on the night of their arrival in the city of Penn, by an alarm of fire, and the yell of several companies of fremen as they lasted along the streets.

"Husband! husband!" she cried, shaking her worser-half into consciousness, "only her worser-half into consciousness, "only hear the Injuns! Why this beats all the scalp dance I ever heard!"

"Nonsense?" growled the gentleman composing bimself to sleep—"There are no ludians in Philadelphin."

"No Injuns indeed?" she replied, "as if I didn't know a war-whoop when I heard one!"

The next morning, on descending to birakfinst, they were saluted with the inquiry of:

"Did you hear the engines last night, what a noise they made?"

noise they made?" Turning to her husband with an air of tri-umph, the lady exclaimed— "There! I told you they were Injune !"

A Military officer, of diminutive stature, was lately drilling an Irishman considerably above six feet. "Hold up your head," said the officer, elevating the chin of the Irishman, with the head of his cane, to an angle of forty-five degrees. "Hold up your head so, and throw your eyes somewhat to the right thus." right, thus."

"And must I always do so, my noble cap-tain?" asked the new recruit, with much apparent simplicity.
"Yes, always," answered the officer.
"Then fare you well, my dear little fellow, rejoined Paddy, "I shall never see you

A Man of wit once said, rightly enough, "He who finds a good son-in-law gains a son, he who finds a bad one, loses a daughter."

The celebrated Rabelais is mid to have made the following will: "I owe much; I possess nothing; I give the rest to the poor."

The history of most lives may be briefly comprehended under three heads : our follies, our faults, and our misfortunes. Rogues usually dress well; rich men dress plain. Trust him, if any one, who carries but little on his back, Manhettan Island, on which the city of New York stands, was bought from the Indians in 1826, for twenty-four dollars.

Men are like bugles; the more brass they contain, the further you can hear them. An exchange paper says, when you see a fellow get trusted for half a gill of molasses, you may suspect that he is getting low in the pocket !?

"Housewifery" is an ancient art, said to have been fashionable among girls and young wives, "a long ship ago," now entirely out of use, or practiced only by the lower orders.

An old lagy and her husband was very fond of peaches, and that was his only fault. Fault, madam! said one, how can you call that a fault T. Why, because there are different ways of enting them. My husband takes them in the form of brandy.

If we go at noon-day to the bottom of a deep pit, we shall be able to see the stars, which on the devel ground are invisible.—
Even so, from the depths of grief,—worn, wretched, seared and dying.—the blessed apparitions and tokens of heaven make themselves visible to our eyes.
