I will attend the Zourts of the adjoining Counting in the selection of the Pours of the adjoining Counting in April, when Watson, we pictors led him to keep himself always. This conspiracy was about coming to a bend sometime in April, when Watson, when surpicions led him to keep himself always are ed, on returning to his house one night, forms a man, whose features he could not delegated in the darkness, lurning at the reast of his stables, and shot him. He was not wanted ed so badly but that he was able, by the help of his accomplices, who were not far off, to get away. This man turned out to be Archie Weatherford—having confessed it himself—though he denied it at first and pretended to be confined to his bed for some weeks by sickness. The confession was made to the zens of the county who went to him while in hed and told him that such were the suspicions against him, that he must rubmit to a personal examination. His confederates, Wiley Weatherford and James Butler, thus came and openly acknowledged that they had all lied about the affair.

Not long after this occurrence, the appreciation was and gave up the afractable while they had furnished her to carry out their inbolical purposes. Soon after Archie Wenther offers recovery, he, together with his broker, armed with double-barrelled guns, stationed themselved at a church in the neighborhood, on a day appointed for worship, for the purpose of shooting Watson, who was aspected to attend church on that day. Some of his neighbors, however, went to meet him and turned him back.
