About two o'clock on Saturday morning the steamer Empire, when five miles below Poughkeepsie, N. Y., on her down passage, was (un into by a sloop with such force as to knock oue of her boilers and some parts of her machinery overboard. This caused the steamer almost immediately to take fire, spreading the utmost consternation among her passengers, who were roused from their slumbers by the force of the sloop run ning into them. They were, however, all rescued safely and brought to Poughkeepsie by a schooner, except some ten or twelve, who were badly scalded, and three or four killed. It is feared that some of the passengers leaped overboard during the consternation and were drowned. The fire on the boat was extinguished as speedily as possible, but she is greatly injured. A dispatch from Poughkeepsie says:
