It was at a period when a long and pro fitless summer and autumn had nearly passed away, that Terloggan; like the vulture, ever watchful for his prey, was more than usually observant of the signs of the heavens; nor was any one more capable than himself of discovering the most dis- but in that ocean cometery the king and the tant indications of a tempest. In his impatien ce he cursed the protraced season of tran but where he and thousands of others of the quility, and hailed the approaceing period of storms as more congenial not only to the "gloomy temper of his soul." but to his interests. At length he saw with a sinile of savage satisfaction, the sun sink in angry red beneath the dim and cloudy horizon; heard with secret exultation the hollow murmuring of the winds; and behelv the blackening waves rising into fury, and lashing the Lfty rocks with their ascending spray As the night advanced in chaotic darkness, the horrors of the tempest increased; and the loud and long blasts of the contending elements rung out upon the ear like the death-knell of a departed soul. "Now's thy time," ejaculated the old hag, his wife, "go thy way out upon the cliff's; there's death in the wind." Ter loggan speedily equipped himself, and ascended the steep promontory at the entrance of the bay. The usual expedient was resorted to, and he soon observed a light at sea as if in answer to his signal. His prey seemed already in his grasp. The light evidently approached nearer; and before an hour had elapsed, the white, close reefect sails of the vessel could be dunly discovered through the darkness, and the appalling cry of the seamen at the discovery of their danger distinctly heard. Signal-guns of distress were immediately fired, and the loud commands, all hands on deck and about ship, were vociferated in wild despair. Every exertion was made to wear the vessel from the shore ; but the redeeming moment was past, the ship was completely embayed, and neither strength nor skill were of any avail in averting her impending fate. In a few minutes a tremendous crash and a heart-rending but fruitless cry for help, announced the horrid catastrophe and the last flashing signal-gun revealed for a moment a scene too terrible to be described. The stranded vessel, hurled repeatedly against the jagged rocks of the bay, soon parted ; the waves dashed over her shattered hull with releatless fury, bearing to the shore the scattered rigging whilst the mingled shrieks of the drowning, blended with the roar of the conflicting slements, rose upon the ear like the JOB, CARD AND FANCY PRINTING, E. There was one, however, in whose eyes such a scene was joyous, in whose ears such sounds were melody; and that being was Terlaggan. He waited impatiently until the storm had somewhat abated , and when silence began to indicate that the work of death was well nigh over, he des cended the well known cliffs to dart upon his prey. Unmoved by the horrid spectacle, (for the moon had broken from the clouds by which she had before been concealed.) he stood awhile gazing upon the scene of desolation around him, at a loss where first to begin his work of rapine. But, to his surprise and momentary dismay, there was yet one living soul on terpose between him and his hard-earned booty, and who was even now loudly supplicating his assistance. Henry's Invigorating ('ordial, is one of the most avaluable Medicines in the many Complaints to which Femalas are subject. It assists nature to brace the whole system, check excesses, and creates renewed health and happiness. Ladies who are debilitated by those obstrucions which females are flable to, are restored by the use of a bottle or two, to bloom and to vigor.

SITTING FOR A DAGUERREOTYPE. facu ties become restored to their proper power and Some months ago, a well-conditioned farmer. from the interior of the State, arrived in Philadelphia, and. after selling his produce and making sundry purchases, recollected pristing health. Oh, how hap-y have hundreds of misgoided youths been made who have been sudthat he had promised, on leaving home, that he would bring back his daguerreotype. It was all a piece of nonsense, he had argued ; but his argument was of no avail, for wife and daughters said that he must do as they wished, and so he had yielded an easy complance. On inquiry, he was told that Root. was the man for him ; so, one bright moraing he took his way down Chesnus to the gallery of the far-famed daguerrotypist.-Mr. Root was at home, of course, and ready cy prevent you, but app'y immediately, and save to accommodule the farmer, who; after look-yourself from the dreadful consequences of this tering at sundry portraits, asking prices and making his own remarks on all he saw, was invited to walk up into the operating room. "Where ?" inquired the farmer, looking curious. "Into the operating room " replied Mr Root, as he moved towards the door. DR. JOHNSTON, of the Baltimore Lock Hea-

The farmer sat down, feeling a little uneasy, for he did not much like the appearance of things. Besides Mr. Root, there was another man in the room, and he feit that, if any unfair play were attempted, they would prove too much for him. The farmer was a man who both took and read the newspapers, and through these he had become acquainted with many cases of "mysterious disappearance." Men with a lew hundred dollars in their pockets-such was then his own case-had been inveigled among robbers and murderers, and he might now be in one of their dens of iniquity. This fear once excited, every movement of the two men, who were acting in concert, but confirmed his suspicions. Their mysterious signs, their evident preparation to act together at a particular moment, all helped to excite still further his alarm. It was more than human nature-at least, the farmer's human nature-could stand ; for, springing suddenly from the chair, he caught up his hat, and. escaping from the room, dashed down stairs as if a legion of evil spirits were after him, to the no small amusement of the two "operators," who, though they lost a customer. had a good joke to laugh over for a mouth.
