WHATNGTON AND HAVANA. We published, some days since, the report of the Committee in relation to steam communica-tion between the ports of Havana and Wilmington, presented to, and unanimously adopted by, our Chamber of Commerce. The Report, while meeting with the approval of the whole Chamber, was no less satisfactory, so far as we have heard, to all who have an interest in the prosperity of Wilmington and the developments of the resources of North Carolina. In connection with that Report, a resolution was adopted by the Chamber, accepting the gratuitous services of one of our citizens, politely tendered to them, about visiting the north, in obtaining information as to the sost of a suitable steamer, &c., and to confer with him, a Committee was appointed on the part of the Chamber, who, in connection with two other citizens, not members of that body, were also to ssee tain without delay, what amount of stock will be taken in furtherance of the undertaking; and repost at the next regular meeting of the Chamber, which will be held on the 4th April

The members of that Committee, we trust, so well known for their public spirit and enterprise, will give to this matter all the attention it deserves; and we hope their Report, which is anxiously looked for, will indicate a certainty of success in the undertaking. We do not wish to forestall any of their views or recommendations; but, at the same time, we may be pardoned for expressing an opinion that, with proper management, the

IRISH CHARACTER.

The Buffalo Republican gives the following in cidents, illustrating some beautiful traits in the Irish character-among the "lowly." The lessons taught by these poor laborers are more benclicial to the people of our America, than all the teachings of Irish politicians:

What are you going to do with your money John I said we to an Irishman of that name, to whom we were indebted for labor. 'I'm going to send it to me mother in Ireland," was the reply. And to her he did send it, and trusted to health and industry to provide for his own necessities This feeling of deep roo'ed sympathy and never cooling filial affection, we have witnessed in every Irish servant, male or female, that we have ever employed or been acquainted with. We have an Irish family in our mind's eve numbering some dozen or more, male and female, the male head of which was turned out of an employment, late in life, in which he had "wrought" during his whole prime of life. They kept together. bound firmly by the strong cords of Irish affection, till famine so pinched that their labor would not suffice to keep absolute want at bay. By an united effort, they managed to get the oldest brother off to America, and he landed here in Buffalo. He took hold of the first employment that he could get, and toiled constantly, living on almost nothing till he had sent home enough to bring another brother. The two labored on nntil they were enabled to import a third. There again toiled and saved, till they sent for a sister She contributed her weekly dollar, till another sister was brought over. And so they kept importing faster and faster, till the whole family, father, mother and all, were safely landed on this

MARGARET.

We have received from the publishers, Messrs Stringer & Townsend of New York, a neat octavo, entitled "Margaret, or Prejudice at Home and its the moral is an exposition of some of the worst katures of Catholicism. The London Press speaks of the work in high terms; one of them says: "This book must touch the hearts and consciences of men, if their religion be any thing more than a pretence. How powerfully the story is told, how boldly and skilfully the characters are drawn, how true its moral, and how severe its satire, no adequate conception can be formed, except by reading it. ican Consul at London.

The following address from Governor to the German population of the United on the rejection by the Senate of George I. ders, sent by the President as United States sul at London, was forwarded to Dr. S. G. Howe, of Boston, the intimate friend and correspondent of Governor Kossuth in this country

We make room for the whole of this address. We wish our readers to see how far we were right our appreciation of the character of this presumptuous and conceited man. That he takes leave to dictate and reprove is not so much to be wondered at. Poor human nature could hardly fail to feel clevated by the ovations bestowed upon him when in this country, and he has only come forward to act, in the character which a large portion of the American people assigned to him, and to display, with fantastic airs, the gaudy costume with which the tom-foolery of the citiand sof this great Republic invested him.

It is some satisfaction to us to have our course which was reprehended by some, vindicated by the conduct of the man himself. The Address, if it had not had any antecedents, would do this. NO. 21 ALPHA ROAD, REGENT'S PARK.

LONDON, MARCH 2, 1854.

RESPECTED SIR: The steamer last arrived from New York brought us the intelligence, much to be regretted, that the Senate of the United States had not approved of the nomination of Mr. George N. Sanders as U. S. Consul at Loudon, Knowing what an influential part Mr. Sanders had in the overwhelming victory of the Democratic party in the Presidential election, and having had oceasien to observe the zeal and energy which Mr Sanders showed in maintaining and advancing the commercial interests of the United States. and at the same time having frequently witnessed the satisfaction and the confidence which he enenterprise must and will succeed. Let us have joys of such of countrymen doing business at this place, as well as the esteem which he had already acquired, the resolution of the Senate might have well taken us greatly by surprise, by its seeming | G. F. GIANOPLE as Secretaries. inconsistency, if not want of principle. Yet I am too much accustomed to respect the principle of non-intervention in the internal affairs of a foreign country to allow myself to make a remark the future of republican principles upon this con-

"Mr. Consul Sanders has in this regard proved himself here to be a real republican, a man of principle. He has given us the spectacle of a real American statesman : one who does not deuv. in the position of an officer of his Government abroad, the republican principles which he professes in his own country. In his official connexions, whether of a diplomatic, political or social nature-where American statesmen, I regret to say, so often disappointed us-he has, as consul of the United States, proved himself a supporter of political exiles, a warm friend of the cause of European liberty, and has ever been ready to render any service that was not incompatible with the responsibilities and duties of his office to all of us who are working for the triumph of the republican principle.

he had proved himself, by his public and private demeanor, a firm supporter of republican princiule. And this has been to us a service the more the political situation of Europe will soon reach a crisis where a renewal of the struggle of freedom against oppression is near and unavoidable. I would be unjust towards the people of the United States if I did not assert that such behavior. in such moments, towards the republicans of Europe, as Mr. Sanders has shown and continues to show, is calculated to command, besides our poor and find from some of its concluding pages, that | thanks, the confidence and satisfaction of the sovereign people of the United States of America and to make him deserve well of the honor, consistency, and interests of his nation. It is under such circumstances, sir, that the Senate of the United States refuse their confirmation to Mr.

"The Senate have, by this unexpected act, dealt a heavy blow to the cause of European liberty; for thereby not only do we find ourselves deprived of the warm sympathy and active support more, the Seante have, by their act, led to the interpretation that they disavow sympathy for the cause of European liberty, and will not suffer their diplomatic agents in Europe to favor the triumph of republican principles. I am far from believing that such an intent, to wit, to injure the cause of European liberty, has determined even one single member of the Senate in casting his vote. If such was the case, we might despair of the vitality of republican principles; yet it is certain that this resolution although unintentional. has produced such a result. The despotic cabinets of Europe are in exultation about it. They regard it as a practical retraction and a remarkaon account of dama, es to be demanded. The ble recantation of the principles pronounced in the inaugural address and the Koszta letter. glect. The American Cons al had declined receiv. They think that the Senate have removed Mr. ing her, considering the marter in the hands of Sanders for that very reason, because he, above all, has verified his republican consistency in his social relations with the republicans of Europe. They take it as a proof that the despots have nothing to fear from the Government of America, while we have nothing to hope from it. And Market street, we were much pleased at the ap- | , hile this brings such a look of scornful triumph | pearance of his "fixings," and think the change | from the eyes of the despots, it has a depressing e.fect on the public spirit of the people; and that, too, in the present critical moment, when the asis so important, so encouraging, and beneficial.

"The recollection of the history of the United States, and the logical tradition of the fundamental principles of the foundation of States, gave us to expect that America would as ist in the cause of freedom in Europe. The present President, at tion 157, with two members to hear from. least, acknowledged that America is yet indebtof Commerce, are empowered with authority to ed for her freedom to Europe. Even if she do not choose to be of any use to us, we may reasonably ask of her not to interfere with our interests. This we is tre a right to demand before God, the world, and history.

"But America has injured us; the Senate, by their resolution, gave us a hard blow. What I experienced in America makes me confidently believe that the opinion of the sovereign people cannot approve such an action. Too often, also, did I hear that the elected servants of the people considered it their highest bonor and duty to be the exponent of the wishes of the people, to doubt that when the public express their will in a constitutional way, yet in unmistakeable terms, the propose Mr. Sanders again as Consul to London-and the Senate, not have reason to despair of the sympathy of the United States, thus teaching the despots of Europe that the republican sympathies of a reablican functionary give him the aurest claims to the confidence of the American Government.

When I left America I bermeathed the seed which I had sown for raising up sympathy for the liberty of Europe especially to the nursing of the German citizens of America : for it is they who combine the republican principles of their new some with love for the old fatherland; and the free future of the dear old fatherland is a solida rity with the future of the other nationalities of

THE NEW HAMPSHIRE ELECTION, AGAIN. The Concord Reporter has another calculation with respect to the political character of the New Hampshire House of Representatives elect, which

"We give in this paper a complete list of the representatives elected from all the towns in the State except three. We designate the political character of the members from the best information we can obtain. We give, of the representatives elected and returned, 153 Democrats and 154 Whigs and Freesoilers. Reckoning the three members to come in as Democrats, the House will stand 156 Democrats to 154 opposition. Freesoilers, but we believe we have rightly designated them as Democrats. We think our estimate will be found correct, but the assembling of the Legislature can only fully determine where the majority lies.' A very close calculation surely. The Concord "S'atesman" of Saturday contains the names of the Representatives elect, whom it classes as follows: Democrats of all shades 150, and Opposi-
