and it is of the highest importance, to know exactly what is in this benighted region. Nothing is easier than to tell all the idle boys about town to pick up all the snakes, lizards, frogs, toads, tree frogs, &c., together with the minnows, chubs, sunfish, perch. shiners, and the like, and throw them into a keg of spirits. Gather many small fish, and preserve inalcohol. To show what use we make of such materials, I enclose a copy of our Catalogue of North American Serpents, the first of a series of which I hope to carry throughout the whole Zoology of North America. Every locality is given and the range of the species thus included. You will perhaps see with some surprise how often the name of Miss. P. occurs. She and Mrs. D. have been most valuable contributors. There are a good many other odds and ends I would like, as the small field mill moles in alcohol ; any nests, eggs or skins of birds, fossil bones from excavations or banks of rivers &c. And to one particular form of lizzard, please pay especial attention. In many of the rivers of N. C. is a small salamandroid like animal, smooth and slimy, with four feet, and a fringed flap (girls) on each side of the neck. It varies from a few inches to a foot. Look sharp for this; it is sometimes called water puppy or water dog. I would like as many of these as I could get. They are in shape much like the water lizards (without scales) found in spring houses and under logs.
