A LETTER FROM A CONDEMNED CRIMINAL The following letter from David Jewell, who was executed at Phtsburgh recently, for murder, has been handed to the Philadelphia Ledger for publication by the person to whom it was addressed. The letter is worthy of a perusal. It contains a valuable lesson. COUNTY PRISON, Pittsburgh, March, 1354. Dear Will:-In a few more short days the existence and history of your friend will end on earth, and before I leave, dear Will, I have a few words of advice to leave with one whom I loved as a brother, and which you appeared to be to me, and have acted as such during my long and painful and your wife, my most profound thanks.

I trust what little I have to say to you will not be deemed wrong nor out of place; there is now abundant reason to believe a Remedy it may be a benefit to you in years to come, and you may profit by it, which I hope of the 5th of July, 1852, and picture to yourself the happy man I was on that glonous but unhappy day to me. I left my little family under the promise to be back again in the course of an hour, to accom-Laurens II, R., S. C., Aug. 4, 1853.

J. C. Avgs. Dear Sir,—My little son, four there I got in the company of some young friends, took a social drink together, from that to another, and another, and yet another; I then forgot my promise to those I held most near and dear to me. And it is to this blighting curse, and against its use, steaspoonful every three hours, commencing in I wish to draw your attention. You are younger than I am, and I know you will bear with me in warning you from ever, ever touching it. I know you are not in the habit of it; but you are kind, open, generous and free hearted, and it is for this that makes me write to you on this occane in addlessing you these lines. But for your | sion; and you will admit that no one knows your generous disposition better than I do.

My first piece of advice to you is never to drink liquor in any way-never do it from the time you read the last words of On J. C. Aven,—Since your medicine has be-come known here, it has a greater demand than one who always was your firm friend, and, thank God, you have proved the same to me. But, for me to say that liquor drinkbest they can say of it, is not too much for the good it has done. I take pleasure in selling it, and child will readily admit and to say and child will readily admit; and to say that liquor drinking is the cause of intemperance, is also saying what no living man Please send me a turther supply, and believe me will deny; and intemperance produces, either directly or indirectly, much the larg-P. Its blighting withering curse is seen and felt in every grade of This grand and important Remedy has restored used your Chirp Pectoral for upwards of one strength and vigor to thousands of the most not. bind husband and wife. It destroys the rent and child. It brings husband and wife, parent and child, to an untimely, and, very often, to an ignominious death. But it is unnecessary for me to depict the evils attendant upon the use of intoxication lihere, and its composition is such as to insure and quors, I wish from my inmost soul that I maint do its reputation. I invariably recommend could have looked with the same calm reflection on this evil, when I had my hberty, as I have since seen, and since studied .-There are but few persons, I am satisfied, but can call to mind in their own recollection, some friend some loved acquantance, whose bright future has been hopolessly blasted by the rice of drinking liquor. will say no more to you on this subject, only remember this :-How many sorrows and how many tears. Which darken life's rough pathway thou dost

To those fiail mortals once within thy power, Who strive to shake thee off—evade thy string, And 'scape the threatening clouds that around Which carker, gloomier grow with each succeed-

I will say no more in regard to this, but ny last word to you is, never never drink quor, and you will be a happy man .-Leave off running with fire engines, they are the means of bringing many a good young man to shame and disgrace. Let your evenings be spent in the society of your wife and child, and my word for it, THE Subscriber offers for sale that most | you will be the happiest of the happy. I can say no more, my heart is too full.
