WILMINGTON, N. C., THURSDAY MORNING, MAY 11, 1854.

MISCELLANY.

INTERESTING MATTER.

The following remarks are taken from a communication in the Charlotte, N. C. Whig, signed by W. W. LENOIR, Esq., of Lenoir, Caldwell county. They will be read with interest by the citizens of this sents the only formidable obstacle in the section :

Taking it for granted, then, that a general system of rail roads, extending into every part of the State, must and will be constructed in North Carolina, let us now revert to the subject more immediately under bur consideration, and view the Atlantic. Tennessee and Ohio Rail Road as a part of the general system of rail roads of North Carolina.

Were those who opposed the Atlantic, Tennessee and Ohio Railroad, because it was proposed to give it a terminus at Charlotte, aware that Charlotte is nearer to Wilmington, on our own seaboard, than to Charleston? Yet such is the fact. The distance in a straight line f om Charlotte to Charleston, would, if drawn in the direction of Wilmington, extend far into the Atlanic ocean. The difference in the distance by rail road would be still greater, in favor of Wilmington. For the rail road connection between Charlotte and Charleston is crooked and indirect, while the connection between Charlotte and Wilming ton would be unusually straight and direct. By a fortunate conformation of its natural route, the Wilmington and Manchester Railroad already extends from Wilmington to Whitesville, in Columbus county, on the direct route to Charlotte. And from Whitesvill to Charlotte, through the fine counties of Roberson, Richmond, Anson, Union and Mecklenburg, there is a direct and very favorable route for a rail road.

It is obvious, then, that, in the future de velopment of the rail road system of North Carolina, one of the first and mos. important rail roads which will be constructed will be a rail road from Charlotte to Whitesville. This rail road will meet the Central Railroad at right angles, and will connect the most wealthy and prosperous portion of our interior with Wilmington, our most flourishing seaport. And North Carolina may well afford to foster the interests of Wilmington with an affectionate hand; for Wilmington deserves well of the State .--Wilmington has done more to promote the improvements of North Carolina than all the other towns in the State; and, in proportion to her wealth and population, is, without any exception, the most liberal and enterprising city in the Union. Wilmington is not only nearer to Charlotte than Charleston is; but it is a fact equ lly significant that Wilmington is nearer to Cincinnati than Charleston is and is also nearer to Cincinnati than New York is. The Atlantic, Tennessee and Ohio-Railroad would open a direct communication between Wilmington and Cincinnati; so direct, in fact, that it would be called an air line, or bee line rail road between those points. And while South Carolina is lavishing millions to connect Charleston with Cincinnati, North Carolina, thanks to the opposers of the Atlantic Tennessee and Ohio Rail Road, stands in the attitude of having refused a naked charter to a rail road stretching its whole length directly between Wilmington and Cincinnati. It may be supposed by some persons that, although North Carolina is able to sustain a general system of rail roads, yet it would be useless to charter the Atlantic. Tennessee and Ohio Rail Road, or a rail road from Charlotte, to Whitesville, because the particular sections of the State through which they would pass would be unable, to sustain a rail road. The statement of a few plain facts will be sufficient to refute such a supposition. There are eighty-two counties in North Carolina, the average population of which is 10,596. The counties of Columous, Robeson, Richmond, Anson, Union and Mecklenburg, through which a rail road from Charlotte to Whitesville would pass, have an average population of 11,000 .--The counties of Mecklenburg, Lincoln Catawba, Rowan, Iredell, Alexander, Caldwell and Watauga, through which the Atlantic, Tennessee and Ohio Rail Road, including a connection with Salisbury, would pass, have an average population of 9,256 which, in proportion to their area, is more than the general average of the State, most of those being among the smallest counties in the State. And these counties will be found to compare as favorable with the rest of the State in other statistics as they do in population. In Illinois, the twenty-two counties through which the great Central Rail Road from Galena to Cairo passes, have an average population of only 7,158. It thus appears that the section of the State through which the Atlantic, Tennes-Co's Store. see and Ohio Rail Road would pass, is superior in population and resources. This section of the State, also, owing to the variety of its soil and climate, exhibits, at each step. varying productions and mutual dependencies, The Atlantic, Tennessee Jan. 21 and Ohio Rail Road would unite the fine regions through which it would pass, with their natural outlets upon the coast ; would combine harmoniously with the other rail roads of the State: would penetrate the mountains by the most available pass, and would form the great channel of communication between our seaboard and the North West. In short, it would combine all the great advantages which men pro-pose to attain by the construction of rail E.P. Hall, Wilmington, Wiley A. Walker. roads. Beyond the limits of North Carolina. both in South Carolina and in the West, the liveliest interest is manifestel in the success of the Atlantic. Tennessee and Ohio Rail Road. Tennessee has made an appropriation, to aid in construction the portion of it which will be upon her soil, of eight thousand dollars per mile. The East Tennessee and Virginia Rail Road company have even gone so far as to cause a way upon the whole route; and, although the Watauga pass has not been subject to the test of an actual survey, it will certainly compare favorable with any other, and is believed, by those well informed on the subject, to present the most eligible route by which a rail road can be made to penetrate the Blue Ridge in North Carolina.
