The Turnpike boy and the Banker. It was during a panic, some years since, that a gentleman, whom we shall now call Mr. Thompson, was seated, with something of a melancholy look, in his dreary back toors watching his clerks paying away sef pounds hourly. Thompson was a hanker of excellent credit. There existed, perhaps, in the city of London no safer concern than that of Messrs Thompson & Co.; but at a moment such as I speak of, no rational reflection was admitted, no former stability was looked to; a general distrust was felt, and every one rushed to his banker's to withdraw his hoard, fearful that the next instant would was, of all others, the most like to insure thief of time."
