GEN. ALFRED DOCKERY.

From Blackwoods Magazine. THE EMPRESS OF RUSSIA.

In the little town of Marienberg lived a Lutheran minister by the name of Skovronski, who was remarkable for his piety, benevolence, and unwearied efforts of doing good. On returning to his humble dwelling one evening, his attention was ar-rested by the cries of a child. His horse showed an unwillingness to proceed; he dismounted, and at a short distance on the snow he discovered the object of distress There lay a half frozen child. Wrapping it in his cloak, he remounted his horse, and in a short time was at the parsonage.

That child was a beautiful little girl, not a year old. It was at once adopted by the pastor, and placed in the care of his faithful servant, an old lady who had long resided in the family. She was named Cath arine, from the circumstance that she was found on St. Catharine's day, the 25th of November. She was nursed with great care and tenderness, and treated by the family as an only child. Her beauty, docility, and sweet temper attracted the at tention of all who saw her. A more lovely little creature could hardly be imagined.

As she grew up, she interested herself in the management of the bousehold affuirs, and was always ready to assist as occasion required. The venerable Skov. ronski was growing old, and, under his excessive labors, for the good of his flock. his naturally robust constitution was evi dently giving way. This deeply affected Catharine, for she loved the good old man as her best earthly friend. She respected him as a parent; but she could never for get that it was he who saved her life .-When he became ill, she would do all for him in her power, and often cheered his lunely hours by singing some beautiful hymns. She would often say, "M: dear a solemn voice: do your dury, and Gon father, what can I do for you? Can I not will bless you.' render you some assistance. Can I do too much for one who saved my life ?"

On the 20th of August, 1702, Marien. berg was taken by the Russians, and many of its inhabitants slain. It was a sad day. Many heart rending scenes were witnessed. Catharine at this time was thirteen years of age, and at the time of the battle was eral visiting the sister of Skovronski, a few miles distant. She heard the cannon, but did not understand the cause. This part of our story must be described by another. Though a slight thread of fiction may be seem in the description, it will give a life like air to the facts presented.

A horse suddenly stopped at the door of the cottage, and a young man hastily dismounted. "The Russians are at Marien- you, my chald? added he, turning to Cathberg ! exclaimed he, rushing into the a. arme, who seemed quite bewildered. partinent. 'I have escaped with difficulty dressing the pastor's sister,) who has given of a soldier than the slave of a general?

arine, sobbing Such was her anxiety to see her b st earthly friend, that she immediately started for Marienberg; but on reaching the town she was met by one of the guard, with, 'Where are you going?' What is that to you? replied the young girl. 'I am in haste, and pray you let me

'You, of course, are not aware, then, that the town is in the hands of the Russians,' said the man. 'Well, what then?' interrupted Catha-

As the officer did not seem disposed to comply with her request, she inquired. Who is your General?

'General Scheremetief,' was the reply. I wish, then, to speak to the General. In a few moments, as the Cussack officer was inquiring where the G neral could be found, an old woman, perceiving her. uttered a cry of despair. O, my dear child, you will see your protector no more! He died on the battle field by a Russian bullet, while in the act of binding up the wounds of a poor soldier. He is deadmy poor master!' The old lady was the servant of Skovronski.

Catharine turned pale at this sad intelligence, and inquired, ' Have you, then, left him there without help?

The officer bade her follow him, and he soon introduced her into the General's tent and, with her uplifted hands exclaimed, ed most of all on earth was now no more. 'A grace, General! for puy's sake, a

The tone of her voice was so peculiar and her countenance so commanding, yet and in the declaration he issued we find so ingenious, that the General was moved these words: "She has been of the greatat the sight of her youth and courage, and est assistance to us in all our dangers, and said, 'The camp is situated outside of the particularly in the battle of Pruth.'

But, said the brave soldier, 'you are not formed to be a slave, though a General a new extra cylinder and log geering, and all the appliances necessary for the full equipment to may be your master. You are now beyond the camp; no person can see you .-Fly! If you want money, here it is.' 'Fly! when I have given my word not to do so? 'The word of a girl without name, withont birth, is of little consequence. I conjure you to fly.

Catharine remained unmoved, and resol ved to fulfit her promise. The search for the pastor continued, and in a few moments he was found, nearly senseless, and quite speechless. After several attempts. he faintly whispered, 'Where am 1?" 'With your friends,' replied Catharine

'I loved you as a solder.' said she; 'I will also love you as an Emperor.' The Czer arose, and taking the hand of the young orphan, presented her to his officers as the future Empress of Russia. Here closes the thread of fiction in our story. After their marriage, the Emperor placed her in a private dwelling in the cr ty of Moscow, where she received every attention becoming her position. She was lovely and beautiful She loved to do good, and to make others happy around her. No doubt Peter the Great saw that sie was precisely the woman who could share his enthusiasm, and sympathize in hiplans. AFFECTING STORY. The robbery of the Trust Company is not the only tragedy of which the Mrs. Elizabeth G. Thompson has also been robbed of a jewel (of a man,) and adviseth with the public touching the same, in words following, to wit:

" $5 REWARD - Left bed and board, without any just cause or provocation, my husband Alexander Thompson, to whom I was lawfully married by Squire McKendree. The said Thompson left this city a few da s since, for parts utknown to his lo ing and devoted wife. My husband is about twenty-four or five years old, but has not yet arrived at years of discretion. He is about five feet six inches in height, dark complexion, blue, jealous looking eyes, and is usually suspicious and distrustful of those he takes an interest it. Any one who will give information of the above personage to me at Columbus, will receive the above reward, and the thanks of his most chaste, virtneus and discon-

A FIENDISH ACT.

The Buffalo (N. Y.) Democrat says, that on Wednesday week, a man restding in the vicinity of Chatham, C. W. drove a yoke of oxen upon the track of the Great Western Road, fastened them head and foot, and then, throwing them on their backs, tied them down and left them. The train which next passed the spot was thrown off, several persons were injured, and great damage was done to the cars. The wretch who perpetrated the act has fled, but a large reward is offered for his apprehension, and we trust he will not escape.
