THE SEER.

BY JOHN G. WHITTIER.

I hear the far-off voyager's horn,

His foot on every mountain pass,

He's whistling round St. Mary's Falls,

He's leaving on the Pictured Rocks

I hear the Yankee's trail;

On every stream his sall.

Upon his loaded train ;

His fresh tobacco stain.

I hear the mattock in the mines. The axe-stroke in the dell,

The Jesuit's chapel-bell t

I see the swarthy trappers come

From Mississippi's springs;

And crests of eagle wings.

Behind the squaw's birchen canoe,

And city lots are staked for sale

Above old Indian graves.

By forest, lake and waterfall

I see the pedlar's slibw;

The lofty with the low.

The steamer smokes and raves ;

The mighty mingling with the mean;

And war-chiefs with their painted bows;

The clamor from the Indian lodge,

The snowy cones of Oregon Are kindled on its way, And California's golden sands Gleam brightly in its ray.

POISONING.

The coroner's jury have found Mr. George W. Green, a wealthy citizen of Chicago, guilty of poisoning his wife with strychnine. The Chicago journals think GREGG & CO., for the transaction of the Lumthat from the wealth and position of the accused, his trial is likely to make a sensation not less than that of Dr. Webster's a few years ago.

A LOST HEIRESS

Catharine Byrne, alias McGuinness, has become beiress to upwards of £20,000 in Ireland, but she cannot be found. Patrick Byrne, the husband of Catharine McGumness, was, it appears, sentenced to transportation some years ago at the Autrun assizes. Soon after the execution of the sentence he was left the property mention ed by a distant relative. This property was transferred to his son. Thomas Byrne, who was then in America, and who has since died, leaving it, with other sums, to his mother, and now the relatives are in a state of great unxiety as to the existence or fate of the interested party.
