MISCELLANY.

From the N. Intelligencer of January 22. THE SOLDIERS OF THE WAR OF 1812.

We publish this morning the speech of the Chairman of the Committee on Resolutions appointed at the meeting of the Old Soldiers on the 8th of January. This gentleman was an actor in some of the most exciting and perilous scenes of the war of 1812, when a mere stripling. What he relates in regard to the severe service of the troops, volunteers, militia, and regulars, ossesses a peculiar interest now that there are but few survivors, coming as it does from the lips of one who had run the gauntlet of the savages, and, in his own strong language, many years ago had " the memory of the facts written upon his brain with steel pen." The resolu the committee, and adopted by the Convention, were published in the National Intelligencer of the 11th instant.

SYNOPSIS OF THE SPEECH OF GEN. COMBS. In support of his Resolutions before the Convention of Old Soldiers of 1812.

Gen. Combs said : No occasion but the Gen. Combs said : No occasion but the present could have induced him to make a public address. He was sick at heart with public address. He was sick at heart with the thought of the desolation pending over himself and his family by the injustice of the Congress of the United States. He who had spoken in thunder tones on every had been here every winter for the last seven years asking for a debt unquestionably due him, and had been unable either to obtain his money or a tribunal in which and taught a lesson to our proud enemy he could assert his claims. But to meet which the rolling of a hundred years will with his old comrades in arms after being separated over forty years was a gratification too great not to call for his best efforts to assert and maintain their rights; and let who would faint or falter by the way-side he would be found faithful to the last. wilderness at the commencement of the The definitive treaty of peace which closed | war, contrasted with its present happy and the surviving officers and soldiers of that terrible winter campaign of 1812 and 1813, heroic struggle.
