When alone Johnny began to consider what it was best to do. There was no way that he saw, by which the owner could be identified by him. A thought struck him ; he would deliver it to the office of the chief of police. But he should lose the sale of his papers if he attended to it then. and if he did his mother and little sister must go without bread that night; for they had nothing to eat save that which the daily sale of newspapers brought. What should he do? He paused awhile, and then said: "Mother you had rather go hungry to night, I am sure ; I would rather too, than keep the purse until to-morrow morning. Let's see !" he put his hands into his pocket, and after fumbling a short time, drew forth three cents. "I've got money enough to buy a loaf of bread for Bule sister's supper and breakfast, and 1 ON the same block with the Metropolitan Hotel and Niblo's Garden, and two blocks above the will go without; so I will go at once and St. Nicholas Hotel, and offers to travelers surgates carry the purse where the owner can ob-accommonations in the heart of Broadway, in im-mediate justaposition to the other first-class houses sain it." Thus saying, he trudged off, with the purse in one hand and a large bundle of newspapers in the other. He whistled as he went, for although pinched with cold and hunger he felt happy because graded to suit bo h the economical and extravagant, he was doing good.

After disposing of the purse, and being called an "honest little fellow" by the potice, he returned home and related to his mother how he had acted. She praised him for so doing, and said he must do right if he perished in the attempt.

The next morning Johnny went from his home a little bluer and colder than usual, for he had no supper or breakfast to fill up his stomach, thereby keeping the cold out. At nightfall he was going home with a light heart, for he had sold papers enough to buy bread to last his mother, sisters and bimself, one day, when he was met by the 50 for sale by ADAMS, BRO. & CO. gentleman to whom he had delivered the purse on the previous day.
