You should have seen the sonable and ungrateful, and that in a world grace with which he would kneel to lace of great variety of taste and wishes, it is a gaiter, or to draw on or off a rubber. He impossible to please all. is a great loss."

'I've no doubt of it, my dear Mrs. Apewell; and I can fully sympathize with you. Our waiter was a perfect adept in his duties, but his presumption, in persisting in wearing a moustache, was too much to endure.'

'I met him in the street, this very morn. ing,' said Mrs. Apewell, 'and the moustache was gone. I had half a mind to engage him for myself, but considering his obstinate disregard of your wishes, 1 refrained. i could not allow a servant to wear a moustache.'

'I think we had better go together, and call at the intelligence office this morning. I must have another shambermaid, also, The girl I took in the place of Carline is a perfect donkey She don't know a flowercase from a water-pitcher, or a napkin from a pillow-shp; and yesterday, when I sent her down with my orders for dinner, mentioning, among other things, a fricassee and some cucumbers, she told the cook I wished her to prepare fried cels and chuckunders.'

Mrs. Apewell laughed as heartily as gentility would permit, at these words of her friend, and Mrs. Pettigrew then arese and prepared for a walk to the office. We will leave the ladies to suit themselves to new servants as speedily as they can, trusting that, as their happiness lies so much in servants and show, neither show nor servants will be denied them, unless for their spiritual elevation.

LIFE OF A NEWSPAPER. BY ITSELF.

My life is shortly told. My first impression was the sensation of a tremendous squeeze which instantly awoke me into life and thought. I was now spread out to the light, and a glow of intelligence completely pervaded me. My ideas were at first new, multifarious and confused. Nations, politics, courts, wars. speeches, fightings, tales, merchandize, marriages, deaths, dit ties, &c. &c. made up my thoughts, which were various and mixed, and I lay in a silent state of wonder and amazement. I soon found that I was but one of a large family, that was ushered into the world at the same time, from the same profific mother. Our whole litter was laid in regular order in a pile-my situation being one of the first born, was particularly oppressed, damp and uncomfortable. 1 had a silent. intuitive, longing wish to get into the world which was at length gratified. Morning and night came and I was carefully folded and laid, Moses like, in a basket, by an urchin who was called the carrier, and berne
