WILMINGTON, N. C.: SATURDAY, JUNE 30, 1855.

STRANGE CONCLUSION. The National Intelligencer, speaking of th Missouri Compromise, says:

That compromise poured oil upon the waves of sectional strife, allayed the irritation of the two extremes, and gave quiet and concord to the country for thirty years. What good has its repeal Front and Princess streets to the Theatre.

The Editors of the Intelligencer must have been "out of town," during the exhibitions of hatred and strife that pervaded the northern portion of the Union, during the existence of this Compromise. It did not quell the turbulence of abolitionism nor give satisfaction to the free States. They were always insisting on more than that, and never gave out any hope that they would conform to its provisions in any case that might test its power, if they could avoid it.

"What good has it done?" This question is asked in relation to the repeal. It has placed the Constitution on its own pedestal, and removed it from the rest of shackling, treacherons Compromises, subject to the whims and caprices of Congressional majorities. If the Constitution is not strong enough to preserve the Union, it can never become so by this outside bolstery. If it will not answer the purposes intended within itself and of itself, it is good for nothing, and ought to give place to another. If the people will not or dare not assert its provisions, for all sections of the Union, it is a rotten concern and the sooner it is upset the better.

If the Union passes through the peril before us, as we hope it may, it will be stronger and firmer than ever. But it could never be expected to continue, while political efforts are constantly making to destroy the rights of the South; followed by personal ruffianism in opposition to the operations of constitutional law.

FOREIGN POPULATION-A MISTAKE.

The statement of the New York Herald, which we published on Thursday, that the French and German citizens of the city of New York, were arming to oppose by violence the execution of the Prohibitory Liquor Law, turns of to be a mistake. The following remarks on this subject are from the Courier des Etats Unis : A certain number of our compatriots, those whose interests the temperance law is likely directly to affect, have thought it expedient to hold a meeting to decide upon a line of common con-duct in view of the eventualities preparing for us by the date—an unfortanate one this time—of the 4th of July. The Herald comments with its bad faith and its habitual perfidy on this strictly legitimate proceeding. It affects to see in it a menace of open resistance on the part of the French population of New York, against the putting in force of the Prohibition law, and evokes the phantom of a foreign insurrection in the streets of the imperial

A calumny or a false assertion, the more or the less, is too ordinary a thing in the columns of Mr. Bennett's journal to be worth, in a general way, the trouble of dwelling a single instant upon it.-Under existing circumstances, however, it is important not to allow an error of any kind to obtain credit which may serve the antagonisms and

The French residing in the United States have always manifested in the exercise of their rights and the observance of their duties, a loyalty which only the most flagrant injustice and the most deep-ly rooted prejudice can refuse to recognise.— Amongst all the European nationalities sheltered by the hospitable flag of the Union, there is not one which practices to a higher degree than ours, respect for the laws, political reserve, and abstinence from intrigue. Menaced at present in one of the vital branches of its commercial interests, it may seek to avert a common peril by a com-mon action, but it is a wilful and unworthy calumny to impute to it ideas of violence and of arm-

In spite of the rumors and alarms which certain journals endeavor to spread for different objects, we persist in thinking that the temperance law is destined to sink itself under the weight of its flagrant unconstitutionality and of its exorbitant tyranny. But should it unfortunately prove otherwise-if the blind obstinacy of sectarians should bring about inevitable conflicts-we boldly venture to predict that our compatriots will know how to maintain their rights without incurring the reproach of having conspired against the pub-

The Herald pretends to have learned that the French red republicans hold meetings at their headquarters in Leonard street, to organise an armed force, with the avowed design to resist, with arms in hand, every attempt to enforce the prohibitory liquor law, and that the Germans also are organized and drilled for the same purpose.— To this intelligence the Herald adds a recommendation to the Germans and the French to lay down their arms, and cast from their minds all idea of an armed insurrection. We think that we can take upon us to assure the Herald that the Germans do citable individuals, which special interests were threatened by this absurd law, were prepared to abolish it by force of arms, before they had even found an opponent. But the great majority of the Germans have too much common sense to be drawn thus hastily into any such movement, the results of which could not but be permature and detrimental. The most excited amongst the persons to whom we allude have also had time to cool down, and to understand that the legal course will give them guarantees enough, and that the extreme measurers which were formerly agitated are entirely useless. Besides, the German press will do its duty in trying to recall to better feelings, where necessary, the ardent and excitable spirits of the German population, as it has always

The New York Herald gives in yesterday's issue the startling intelligence that the Germans and French of New York are preparing to resist the enforcement of the temperance law, and have al-ready established depots of arms for this purpose. In what those arms consist, whether muskets, pis-es had been made an amendment was adopted as tols, or revolvers, or whether they are of heavier calibre, such as cannons, culverins, and mortars, our contemporary, the Herald, leaves us quite in the dark. He is, however, kind enough to add, Missouri compromise." The resolutions were by way of conclusion, the well intended advice that the Germans and French should beware of such an opposition to the law, if they do not want to be shot in the streets like dogs.

The Herald in this statement presents some news to the public, about which the Germans are as ignorant as others. Where are, then, those large depots of arms, those magazines of muni-tions, those cannons, these culverins, those large pieces of ordnance and mortars? Will the Herald be so kind as to indicate to us those places, or shall we look upon this exciting intelligence as a weapon which he often thinks proper to use against foreign citizens? The Herald may rest perfectly tranquil about the 4th of July. Its editor will not be kept awake by the firing of mus-kets, or the thundering of cannons. But one thing we will tell the Herald no Neal Dow doings can be played off against the Germans. Were such sings attempted, there would then indeed be a mestion of powder and shot, and then the Herald ould probably be convinced that shooting down like-dogs is a phrase more easy to use than to carry into effect. We would in that case also see showers of balls proceeding from a quarter from which on'y a few balls are now expected to come. The temperance men of this place had better not entertain the impression that they have to deal with a crowd of Portland boys. We feel assured, however, that matters will not proceed to such ex-tremities. The stupid statement of the Herald, together with the violent sentiments which it utCELEBRATION OF THE 4th OF JULY.

Piracy is now-a days of rare occurrence, sea going commerce being thoroughly protected against depredators by the numerous European and American naval vessels scouring the ocean. Yet a case of piracy has lately occurred in the most frequented sea of the old world, in the Mediterranean, Tres Forcas, by a fleet of five armed boats, containing at least two hundred pirates. The boats. which were quite large and full of men, appeared to be on the watch, as immediately upon seeing the vessel they came out from a creek or river. and approaching within a quarter of a mile of the ship, opened a tremendous fire on her with very large swivel gnns.

Until this fire was opened the Captain of the ship never suspected that the boats were piratical, but then seeing no other chance of safety.

OPENING LETTERS IN THE MAIL Postmaster General Campbell was applied to recently by the Postmaster at York, Pa., to know whether a letter containing, as was supposed, counterfeit money, could be opened at the request of the police authorities, in order that the money contained therein might be identified as the same as that passed by the prisoner, and that thus further evidence might be furnished to aid in his conviction and punishment. The Postmaster General replied, emphatically, that it could not; that he had no right, nor any officer under him, to open any letter until it reached the Dead Letter office, and that this principle must be always acted upon by those in the employment of the Department. Judge Hall, of New York, formerly Postmaster General, gave a decision a few days ago, that a letter in the mails could not be opened

Bow, wow! Bow, wow! Mad dog, mad dog! On and after the 25th June, fifty cents will be paid for every unmuzzled dog delivered at the city pound." (City ordinances.) "Man's inhumanity to man makes countless millions mourn. Millions of men of course. But where is the poet who has sung the barbarisms inflicted upon the canine race-man's gentlest companion and most faithful friend. Warned by white hats and trowsers and sweat moistened dickies, that the dog servitors sculk with clinging tails and wire-woven muzzles along the streets, woefully eyeing the loafing boys and negroes on the corner, and fearing, as is too often the case, that a lolling tongue will be misconstrued into hyrophobia, and that they shall die amid a shower of exultant cries and murderous brickbats. Such is the quadruped welcoming which greets those days of first hot weather. Upper tendom has escaped these, and in nankeen trowsers and zephyr-webbed morning robes is staying out the sultry days in the green interior or up the breezy Hudson, until the fashionable almanac points to the home return next September. But the sub-stratum, the workers and toilers are abiding the coming of sun strokescholera and dysentery, fast at their posts, plodding the barkmill round of daily life, with discontented necessity, receiving what their fates dispense. And in what respects Yankee ingennity has come short of solacing the chafing cares of midsummer the philosophising German fills grafting the Teutonic naturalness upon the Saxon hot house growth. And thus it has befallen, that now when Sol is lancing us with solsticial rays that the "Sangerfert," or musical festival of the Germans has been set so that now our city is resonant with the intermingling of various musical societies from all the States. On Saturday evening they made one of the finest displays in the Park ever seen in this city. Groups were gathered at various points with several superior bands of music, and at a signal the whole Park was illuminated with the glare of a thousand torches and colored lights. The bands discoursed their sweet strains, and well trained voices joined in stirring choruses until the air fairly trembled with music. The scene was nore like one of Eastern eachantment than practical Yankee creation. To-day the Sangerband hold a musical festival such as are held in Germany amid the vineyards of the Rhine, when a pic nic will be served up, songs of the Fatherland sung, and in short a page of rural German life opened to us.

It is not often that I get an 'out,' which privileges me, cooped up as I am within these walls of brick and mortar to smell a country rose or drink a cup of cow's milk, but I did wander on Saturday as far as Flushing, and tumbled in with a pic nic party which pleased my fancy. I wrote you something last week about Mr. Pease's school at the Five Points, and I want to tell you now that this same rusticating crowd was the identical community of ragged infants (ragged no longer) whose highly bettered condition and excellent teachings I observed and listened to a week ago, who were out on a merry making in the greenfields with all the paraphernalia of the most refined and polished company. We deeply regret to announce the death of Rev. S. W. CAPERS, which occurred on the 22d instant, after a few hours illness, says the Camden Journal. We have often listened with pleasure and gratification to his words of soberness and truth, and can now recall many pleasant incidents of a religious character connected with this faithful servant of God.
