MISCELLANY. A RICH OLD UNCLE, AND A BILLIOUS FEVER.

BY OUR FAMILY PHYSICIAN.

Linda Ray was scarce seventeen .-Beautiful as an hour, of course, as all heroines are. But more than this Linda had a mind and a heart of goodness, as well as personally beautiful.

She was the brightest scholar of Mrs. -'s seminary, was the joy of her father, the pride of her mother, and the go-between and confidant of a score of elect had married his rich old uncle! that little Rays—her noisy young brood of brothers—and the friend and consoler will being made in force of little Rays—her noisy young brood of cum) was cut off with even a shilling—the of all the poor and distressed who came successors. within her knowledge.

It was now in the fitful month of April. The following June was to witness the bridal of Linda and her lawyer lover, upon which event the happy pair were to start for "the Springs."

Linda looked magnificently on horsback, and on this April morning, in her THE AFFLICTING PLAGUE AT NORFOLK, favorite exercise, she was sitting like the queen of beauty, glowing with freshness and radiant with joy upon the back of her matchless bay-the most knowing and graceful piece of horseflesh freight of any consequence. The look-the strange mysterious look-that of soul recognizing soul which passed between them when Linda opened her eyes full upon him, haunted young Slocum like a disagreable nightmare for months after.

The next day, the tall, handsome stranger called upon the lovely girl he had rescued from certain death, to inquire after her health.

Some how or other it was full three hours before the "call" was concluded. Time had passed so pleasantly in that who were instructed to report upon the feasibilieasy flow of thought and sentiment, ty of the plan proposed. After a careful considersurprised at its rapid flight.

True, he had never spoken of love, but when he was gone, Linda had found to her dismay that he had taken her heart with him, and that Slocum seemed to her now nothing more than a sort of automaton man, brainless and heart-

"But I will be true to honor and my promise," said the courageous Linda, resolutely. "I will marry him, and make him a true wife I will bury my &c., own heart and its love, and perform my duty faithfully,' Alas! alas! "There is many a slip between the cup aad lip.'

A rich old uncle of the portionless Slocum suddenly arrived from the "gol- infants from t up to 5 years old. G. W. P. den East," sought his nephew, made his will, and Slocum, the almost pen-niless, the almost briefless lawyer, awoke in the moring a rich man.

been said and written, the following communica-

comfort the widow and care for the orphan. If a committee of heroic men and women would visit our place, spend but a day, and acquaint themed in that young heart. A deeper depth than the shallow line of the groom would know how to do it. The charities received by this town have, in money, amounted to about sixteen thousand dollars, besides a considerable amount in provisions, hospital stores, &c., whilst in Norfolk, with a population not much exceeding ours, their receipts have been more than three times as much. I think this arises from a misapprehansion of many at a distance, who suppose that Portsmouth is a part of Norfolk, and that we receive a portion of all that is appropriated for her relief. We do not blame Norfolk for this; we only explain it for ourselves. I begun this, my dear sir, as an official communication; I have, inadvertently, extended it .-Community of suffering has made us all friends here, and we hopefully look abroad for the same feeling. I have all the time remembered, too, that we were once friends, and my present mood would render me again familiar. Very truly, yours,

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, and the darling of his parents, should he snatched from all prospects and enjoyments of life by the consequences of deviating from the path a nature, and indulging in a certain secret habit.—Such persons, before contemplating MARXIAGE.

Should reflect that a sound mind and body are the most necessary requisites to promote connuctal happiness. Indeed, without these, the journay through life becomes a wear; pilgrimage; the propect hourly darkens to the view; the mind becomes shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection that the happiness of another becomes blighted with our own.
