Tom !' 'Tom was sound asleep, enoring ! had just struck one. The back yard was an impossibility, and but one chance remained. There was a porch over the front Yoor, the roof of which was but a few feet fit.

'I judged it prudent to wake then, and below two windows. One of them I knew was fastened down, and the other opened jumping from my bed, raised the window, from a bedroom, which might or might not and rubbing one eye, and looking particube occupied. An old maiden sister of Tim's larly frightened (which I was) asked :-'Why, father, what in the world's the wife had arrived on the same day, and it was very probable she was in that room ; matter ?"

but I knew the bed was in the corner far. . "There's thieves in the house," was the thest from the window, and hoped I should reply. 'Get your gun and come down; be able to get in without awakening her, and be quick !' 'He's in the room below you, Tom,' hal-and then I had a comparatively easy thing of it. So, getting a plank from a neighbo. 'He's in the room below you, Tom,' hal-lowed Tompkins. 'I'm certain of it. I saw ring board pile, I rested it against the cave him as he ran down, and threw a fire brick of the shed, pulling off my shoes put them at him. I know he didn't pass that door, in my pocket, and then 'cooned up.' All Mr Jones.'
