MISCELLANY.

THE LIFE OF A COQUETTE. The beautiful Baronne B - was a coquette and a widow, and was too proud of the precious freedom of widowhood to wish to mar it a second time in the silken bonds of wedlock. So, strengthening her weak woman's heart with the shield of universal coquetry; she bade definace to the sighs and vows with which she was attacked She laughed at the credulity of her victims. and despised them that they could see so long and so vainly; but in their triumples she lost the better attributes of the woman's gifts-her beauty; her youth and her witshe trampled them under feet as worthy offerings to her own pride of soul.

The only recollection our wislow kept of tnatrimony was that it had furnished her with a tyrant and a fortune. Her husband had been cold, stern and inflexible, but the fates decreed that she would soon be released from him, and she was blooming and beautiful !- the cynosure of every gazeamong the men, be it understood. Perhaps it was not so wholly her own fault that she was such a despot. Her bright eyes gave laws to her crowd of followers. She reward ed with a smile; she could punish with a single word, exterminate with an epigram. exile with a look. She lelt her power, and used it. Men feared her wit, while they were led captive by her beauty. Women hated her but could not detect a flaw me she show of her character worse than that she was a cold-hearted coquette. There was one, however, among her train of ador ers who had vowed to hinself to win this lady; and le tire w himself, heart and sour. at the coquette's feet, sure that the reality of his own feilin's must conquer the frivo lous caprice of her character. He was all heart and feeling. 'Love's greatest miracle is to slay coquetry, said her in fortunate lover when he left the salons where his misress reigned supreme. But to Madame B a secret voice nurmered in the tones of rejoicing-What happiness to love no one and to see one's self beloved by all !' But what misery to the lover to see his worshipped smiling upon all the same beaming smile. Hale the jealousy from the scornful eyes of this coquettel sighed The beating heart. Of all ills which lovebrings jealousy is the one for which women has the least sympathy. And so the Coun: Stephano hid his misery in flight .-Abscence is the tomb of slight passions; but it tans the spark of a real affection into a flame. He therefore, as it was but natural that he should, as q ickly returned and laid his affections once more at her feet. Count Stephano was not to be deshe had listened too long-she had gone too far to receile-she could hear bing. He continued his persevering addresses till one morning she sent him this Your love annoys me, dear friend-for so, in spite of all, I must call you-and your jealousy frightens me. I have, therefore, taken refuge in flight, and by the time you receive this, shall be far on my way to a land whither you dare not follow me. My uncle commands an Austrian garrison in Italy, and I mean to join him at Milan I hope to meet you again one of these days in France, when you shall have learned to sink the lover in the friend; and when I hope to find you a reasonable and modest gentleman, instead of a wilful, passionate Italian lover, who cares not to understand the caprice of a woman's heart.'

'She shall not escape me thus,' he said; the coquette shall learn what it is to deal with men's hearts. I shall follow her.' He was proscribed, his estate confiscated, and a price set upon his head. He therefore hazarded much in entering Italy again. The Count Stephano had taken an active part in some revolutionary proceedings in his native land, and, having rendered himself obnoxious to the Austrian government, escaped with his life and a moderate fortune to France. The Baronne had been some short time who desired to see Madame B at once. 'His name?' said the lady. 'He will not give it.'

'Then we will not admit him,' said the General.

'Oh, let us see him,' said the Baronne, perhaps it is some friend of mine who is in

'As you will,' said the General. And Count Stephano entered the cham-which trembled on her lips, the Count's fate would have been soon decided; but for once the coquette's ready wit served her in a good cause.

'Ah, my dear cousin,' cried she, how glad I am to see you. No doubt you have taken me at my word, and you are come to escort me home. I shall be ready in a few days. Allow me to introduce you to my uncle, Dear uncle, this is one of my husband's family, whom you have never met before.

The old Austrian General held out his hand to the Count, and bade him a curteons welcome. Count Stephano could scarcely repress a smile at his strange position although he felt that he stood in a perdons situation; and the lady suffered all the horrors of intense anxiety, now but imperfectly veiled beneath her usual gay and careless air. For the first tune in her life our coquette felt that she had to reply be fore God and man for the life which her levity had placed in jeopardy She passed the night in pacing her chamber, in weep ing bitter tears, in prayers which rose from

'Never see bim again!' gasped the Baronne, clasping her hands, then am I inleed punished by a just Heaven.'

'The police have tracked him to my nouse. I have received information from them; have myself examined him, and neard the whole history of our wrongs to wants him. My duty forces me to be stern and unflinching. I am bound to violate the sancity of my own roof and air st him even here. At this very moment he ought

But as Camilla had no wish for such a olitary fate, she did penace for her faults and follies by taking upon herself the vows of obedience, and shining hence forward as duteous and loving wife.

A CERTAIN DISEASE.

When the misguided and imprudent votary of pleasure finds he has imbibed the stede of this painful disease, it too often happens that an ill-limed sense of shame, or dread of discovery, deters him from applying to those who, from education and respectability, can alone befriend him, delaying till the const utional sysmptoms of this horrid disease make their appearance, such as ulcerated sore throat, diseased nose, noctural pains in the head and limbs, dimness of sight, deafness, nodes on the shin bones and arms, blotches on the head, face and extremities progress on with frightful rapidity, till at last the palate of the mouth or the bones of the nose tall in, and the victim of this awful disease becomes a horrid object of commisseration, till death puts a period to his dreadful sufferings, by sending him to "that bourne from ferings, by sending him to "that bourse from DURKEE'S YEAST OR BIKING POWDER, Dr. Johnston pledges himself to preserve the or. Johnston pleages himself to preserve the most inviolable secrety; and, from his extensive practice in the first Hospitalsia Europe and America he can confidently recommend a safe and speed cure to the unfortuna evictim of this horrid disease. It is a melancholy fact, that thousands fall victims to this dreadful disease, owing to the unskilfulness of ignorant pretenders, who, by the unskilfulness of ignorant pretenders, who is the interest of the in of that deadly poison, mercury, ruin the constitution, and either send the unfortunate sufferer to an untimely grave, or else make the residue of life mis-

TAKE PARTICULAR NOTICE. Dr. J. addresses all those who have injured the selves by private and improper indulgences. These are some of the sad and melanchely

MARRIAGE.

Physical or Mental Disqualifications, Nervous Irritability Tremblings and Weakness, or exhaustion of the most fearful kind, speedily cured by Dr. Young men who have injured themselves by a certain practice indulged in when alone—a habit frequently learned from evil companions, or at school, the effects of which are nightly felt, even school, the effects of which are nightly felt, ever when asleep, and if not cured, renders marring impossible, and destroys both mind and body.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, and the darling of his parents, should be snatched from all prospects and enjoyments of life by the consequences of deviating from the path of nature, and indulging in a certain secret habit.—Such persons, before contemplating

Should reflect that a sound mind and body are the most necessary requisites to promote communial happiness. Indeed, without these, the journey through life becomes a weary pilgrimuge: the prospect hourly darkens to the view; the mind becomes shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection that the happiness of another becomes blighted with our own.
