A somewhat noted lawyer of his city is about to appear before the public in a rosecution for false prefenses, caused by a conection with a fair and finil, but intellectual woman, who purchased a large amount of property and obtained a considerable amount of money by an unscrupulous use of his name. One of our udges has lately suffered somewhat from the too easy yielding of a good heart to the politeness of woman's urgings. Even politics have been latey invaded by the "strong minded," and the Presdency may be settled by the impressment of a coman's will. The iron soul of a Jackson, it is said, gave way to the arts of female diplomacy, and that episode in the history of our country cannot be crased from its pages.
