"COME THIS WAY, FATHER."

During a short visit to the sea-shore of our State, some two years since, with a party of friends, it was proposed one bright afternoon that we should make up a party and go down the harbor on a fishing excursion. We accordingly started, and after sailing about three miles, a young lady of the company declined going farther, and requested us to land her on one of the small islands in the harbor, where she proposed to stay until our return. My little boy, then about four years old, preferred remaining with her. Accordingly, we left them, and proceeded some six miles farther. We remained out much longer than we intended, and as night approached a thick fog set in from sea, entirely enshrouding us. Without compass, and not knowing the right direction to steer, we groped our way along for some hours, until finally we distinguished the breaking of the surf on one of the islands, but were at a loss to know which one of them. I stood up in the stern of the boat, where I had been steering, and shouted with all my strength. I listened a moment, and heard through the thick fog and above the breaking of the surf, the sweet voice of my boy calling, "Come this way, father!—steer straight for me—I'm here waiting for you!" I steered by that sound, and soon my little boy leaped into my arms with joy, saying, "I knew you would hear me, father!" and nestled to sleep on my bosom. The child and the maiden are both sleeping now.—They died in two short weeks after the period I refer to, with hardly an interval of time between their deaths. Now tossed on the rough sea of life, without compass or guide, enveloped in the fog, and surrounded by rocks, I seem to hear the sound of that cherub voice calling from the bright ethera, "Come this way, father!—steer straight for me!" When oppressed with sadness, I take my way to our quiet cemetery; still, as I stand by one little mound, the same musical voice echoes from thence—"Come this way, father!—I'm waiting for thee!"

I remember a voice
Which once guided my way
When lost on the sea,
And schooled my way,
'Twas the voice of a child,
As he stood on the shore—
It sounded out clear
Over the dark billow's roar—
"Come this way, father!"
Here safe on the shore
I am waiting for thee!

I remember that voice
Which then and my heart
Did it sound from the shore,
As it stood on the shore,
"Come this way, father!"
Here safe on the shore
I am waiting for thee!

I remember my joy
When I held in my breast
The form of that dear one,
And smoothed it to rest,
For the tones of my child—
"I called you, dear father,
And knew you would hear
The voice of your darling
"Far o'er the dark sea—
While safe on the shore
I was waiting for thee!"

That voice now is hush'd
Which then and my way,
The form I then press'd
Is now mingling with clay;
But the tones of my child
Still sound in my ear—
"I am calling you, father—
O, can you not hear,
The voice of your darling
As you toss on life's sea?
For on a bright shore
I am waiting for thee!"

I remember that voice;
In many a lone hour,
It speaks to my heart,
With fresh beauty and power,
And still echoes far out
Over life's troubled way,
And sounds from low'd lips
That lie in the grave—
"Come this way, father!
O, steer straight for me!
Here safe in Heaven
I am waiting for thee!"

THE CONVICTION OF DR. PALMER.
A trial of very great interest, which has been going on for some time past in England, was brought to a close on the 27th of May by the conviction of the prisoner. Some accounts of the charge and the circumstances connected with it, our readers may have seen of late in the items of foreign intelligence given upon the arrival of the ocean steamers, but the case is so remarkable in many of its aspects, that we think a fuller statement, such as we gleaned from the report of the trial in the columns of the London Times, will not be unacceptable. The crime involved in the legal proceedings to which we refer, was that of murder, committed by administering poison with a stealthy adroitness and a diabolical coolness of purpose that carry our minds back to the imperial atrocities of the Borgias. The criminal, by name William Palmer, was by education a physician, but falling into evil courses he became passionately addicted to the turf, and the turf in England is the propylon—the great vestibule—to the temple of Ruin. Few men, not blessed with colossal fortunes, can stand up long against its vicissitudes of loss and gain without becoming bankrupt in pocket or in character. Stowes and Chatsworths and Blenheim even, have here this melted away from the possession of their owners, like a dissolving view, by means of the wondrous magic and phantasmagoria of a betting book, and William Palmer, whose means originally were none of the largest, soon saw the last of his sovereigns pass from him in the perilous precincts of the "Ring." His first resource was usury, and a London Shylock for some time administered to his necessities upon forged acceptances, at the mild rate of 60 per annum. This sort of relief could not last long and terminated, as it always does, with threats of exposure, from which the victim only extricated himself by a resort to murder. His wife's life was insured for £13,000, about $65,000. This handsome sum, Palmer obtained possession of by giving her strychnine and removing her from earthly sorrows to come. But the pecuniary ease, purchased by so dreadful a burden of mental remorse, proved but temporary, and very soon Shylock whose name was Pratt, was down upon him for the redemption of some heavy bills he yet held, and it became necessary to procure more money. The use of strychnine was now familiar to Palmer, and as he had a brother, whose life was also insured for £13,000, he resolved to obtain this sum by the same means he had used so successfully in the case of his wife. The poison was given, the brother died, Palmer rivalled Brinvilliers in the employment of sedatives, but the scheme failed when the insurance company resisted the payment of the policy.

This was about a year ago. Suspicion was of course aroused against Palmer, but for want of evidence, no bill of indictment was found in the matter of his brother's murder. Meanwhile, the demands of Pratt were becoming every day more clamorous and at last a writ was issued against Palmer and his mother (whose name he had feloniously used upon the bills negotiated) for £4,000. Just at this time, chance threw in his power an acquaintance of the Turf, named Cooke, who had won a race and had some £2,000 in his pocket. The strychnine was tried on Cooke, he died, and PALMER pocketed the proceeds. But long immunity in the prosecution of crime had rendered PALMER careless in his manipulations and a sufficient amount of evidence, direct and circumstantial, was brought together to convince a British jury of his guilt and he has been condemned to die.

Upon reading over the report of the trial, we have been strongly impressed with it as a splendid illustration of the impartial character of English justice. The judges who sat up the bench, three men, whose names are already known all over the earth for great legal learning and incorruptible integrity—CAMPBELL, ALDERSON and CRESSWELL—have shown by the firmness and impartiality with which they watched over the rights of the prisoner while vindicating the majesty of the law, that however degenerate or corrupt may be the Parliament or the Army of England, that great Realm yet boasts a judiciary worthy of the days of MANFIELD. Almost every point raised in the trial by the defence was decided in favor of the prisoner, and it was only in the summing up of the evidence by Chief Justice CAMPBELL, where the prisoner's own acts made the substance of the unfavorable comment, that one was able to discover the opinion of the Court as to his guilt or innocence.—Petersburg Express.

ATTEMPTED FRAUD UPON AN OHIO WOMAN.
Mrs. Mary Gold of Mansfield, Ohio, arrived in Jersey City on Monday evening on her way to her husband in California. On stepping out of the cars, at the depot, she was approached by a California ticket seller, alias a deeply dyed scoundrel, who in a cool manner, cunningly calculated to throw a woman off her guard, asked if "she, too, was bound for California?" Mrs. Gold replied, "Yes." "Well, madam," said the rogue, "I advise you to buy a ticket at once; I would not stop here a day without securing a berth," and at the same time, to secure confidence, placed in her hands the regular card of the "United States Mail steamers for California." Mrs. Gold replied, she did not want his advice, &c. He, however, presented himself again in New York, and took her child in his arms and carried it to the carriage she had engaged to take her to Savery's Temperance Hotel, and then mounting the box of the coach, talked in an under tone to the driver. Mrs. Gold thinks the coach was driven around several blocks in order to confound her; and stopped at length at one of the hotels or lodging houses where emigrants, in Greenwich street, were formerly robbed. She was then told that she had arrived at Savery's, and must get out.—Feeling suspicious, she said the house did not look to her like Savery's; that there was no sign upon it, and she would not go in until she could see Mr. Savery. The ticket-seller then ran up stairs, and quickly down again, saying "Mr. Savery is not in, but the landlady is up stairs, and will wait upon you." He then seized the little girl and carried her into the house. Mrs. Gold, after a short delay, followed, but stopping just outside the door, while the rascal was making his way up stairs.—At this juncture she met a third man, and asked him if that was Savery's Hotel. He replied "No, but you will be treated just as well here as at Savery's." At the same moment a woman appeared, and asked her if she did not want company to California, and then informed her that she was on her way there, and would like her company.—Mrs. Gold replied that she did not want her company; she wanted to go to Savery's, and they must take her there. She turned to go out, but found the outside door locked. Being much frightened, she burst into tears, and a moment after, seeing a side door leading into a bar and eating-room, of which the front door was open, she rushed that way into the street.—The rascals inside, finding themselves foiled, and the child beginning to scream for its mother, were now forced to open the door. The ticket-seller brought the child out, rudely threw her into the coach, and ordered the driver to go to Savery's. The driver now declared that he did not know anything of Savery's Hotel if that was not it; but on being told by Mrs. Gold to drive her to the residence of Mr. Frederick Cooke, No. 2 College place to whom she had a letter from his Ohio banker, he concluded he could find Mr. Savery's, and then drove there without loss of time. Nearly two hours were employed by the two rascals in the attempt to rob her. Complaint was made by Mr. Cooke to the Mayor. The driver was arrested, and on the affidavit of Mrs. Gold was fined $10, in default of which he was sent to prison for ten days. The runner has not yet been found, but the police are on his track.—These cases of fraud in the matter of tickets to California are very numerous. Six other persons appeared at the Mayor's office with their complaints, but nothing could be done for them.

THE NORTH CAROLINA MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY, RALEIGH, N. C.

THE above Company has been incorporated since the 1st of April, 1854, under the direction of the following officers: Dr. Charles E. Johnson, President, Wm. D. Haywood, Vice President, John G. Williams, Secretary, Wm. H. McKee, Treasurer, Perrin Busbee, Attorney, Dr. Charles E. Johnson, Medical Director, Dr. Wm. H. McKee, Medical Board of Consultation, R. W. Haywood, J. Hersman, General Agent.

This Company has received a charter giving advantages to the insured over any other Company.—The 25th Section gives the husband the privilege to insure his own life for the sole use of his Wife and Children, free from any claim of the representatives of the husband or of his creditors. Organized on purely mutual principles, the life members participate in the whole of the profits which are declared annually. Besides, the applicant for life, when the annual premium is over $30 may pay one half in Note. All claims for insurance against the Company will be paid within 30 days after proof of the death of the party is furnished. Slaves are insured for one or five years, at rates which will enable all Slaveholders to secure this class of property against the uncertainty of life. Slave insurance presents a new and interesting feature in the history of North Carolina, which will prove very profitable to the small ones, that by some repairs and alterations, would do well for wood-turning lathes. They will all be sold low. Persons in want of lathes for a small establishment would do well to call and examine them: A Stone-Mason wanted to rebuild one of the piers at N. E. River.

PROSPECTUS OF THE PLYMOUTH BANNER.
THE subscribers having purchased the "Village" establishment, will commence publishing a weekly Newspaper of the above title, about the middle of January, 1856.
Our paper will be independent in all things, and neutral in nothing; giving all parties and creeds a respectful hearing. It will be devoted to the interests of Plymouth, North Carolina, and the South—in Education, Agriculture, Internal Improvements, and the development of the resources of the State.
We will do all in our power to make our paper interesting to the general reader, as well as to the business man. Proper attention will be given the Marine List and Price Current. In short, we will try to make the "Banner" a neat paper, and a companion to all classes, from the Parlor to the Counting Room, and one worthy the support of those favoring us with their patronage.
