MISCELLANY.

A REVOLT ATSEA.

BY HAWSER MARTINGALE.

One pleasant moonlight night, as the good ship Conch Shell, having passed the equator, was slowly wending her way to-ward the Cape of Good Hope, being close hauled in the trade latitudes, the watch gathered on the torecastle, and Sam Ritson. who loved a story better than salt junk, appealed to his watchmates for the relation of some interesting narative, or striking adventure, to enable them to pass more pleas antly the hours of their watch.

'Come, Jack Grimsby,' said he, 'you were alluding the other day to an ugly scrape you gut into once, by being engaged in a revolt at sea. Suppose you give us the facts, and the consequences-such a relation may serve as a lesson to us, and teach us to sheer off from the rocks on which you were nearly wrecked. Such yarn will lend us a hand to pass the time which begins to grow heavy.'

'To be sure it will,' exclaimed David Huntoon, who also liked full well to see h yarn on stretched-'and Jack will spin it I know, with pleasure, even should it prove as long as the pennant halliards."

Jack Crimsby made no very strong ob jection, and on being further urged, con sented to gratify the wishes of his ship mates, and leaning back against the heel of the bow sprit, and assuming the digni fied manner becoming his important position as a story teller, proceeded as follows .

·I once shipped on board the ship Whip poorwill, Captain Stanway, on a voyage to the Mediterranean. The Whippoorwill was not a bad vessel, and the captain and officers were not the worst of men; and I really believe if the ship's company had conducted themselves properly we should have been a contented and happy set of fellows, and there would have been no insurbordination or trouble an board : for it is a well known saying, and one which is as true as the sun dial on a ship's capstan, that good sailors make good officers. But unfortunately for peace in the cabin and in the f recastle, there were two or three old man-of-war's men on board, real hard characters, who had been kicked and cuffed about the world, until they hated every pody in it, even themselves-fellows casehardened by salt water, who delighted in ment, and rebelled against order and dis. decidedly getting the worst of it. cipline. To keep such chaps straight re-jib boom. But Captain Stanway, although in ca ses of emergency, not deficient in spirit and resolution, was rather an easy man, of necessarily to vigorous or violent measures This was soon seen by 'the clocksetters' in the forecastle, who resolved to take advantage of it. Instead of checking their presumption and impudence at the first going off, he allowed them to get such headway. that it was hard work afterward to bring them to. A very common error on the part of some shipmasters. These fellows were lazy, impudent and ill-natured-thorough grumblers of course When on deck they were slow about their work, and unfaithful in the performance of it-and always gave short answers and sulky looks to the officers. When below, they were always complaining of the hard usage-and holding up the Captain and mates to the relicule and contempt of the gest of the crew and haranguing their watchmates on the folly of submitting without resistance to the authority of such a know-nothing set of officers. The influence of these worthless fellows, operated mischievously on the minds of their shipmates, mostly young men, who, without any will of their own, allowed themselves to be led by the nose by the rascals. Indeed, the chief subject of conversation in the forecastle, was the tyrannical conduct and the felly and weakness of those who had authority on board-and it was not long before every man, myself among the rest, conceived himself to be most harshly and unjustly used, held the inmates of the cabin in utter contempt- and felt desirous to shirk his duty as far as possible and provoke and annoy the Captain and mates

'Matters continued in this pleasant and agreeable condition during the remainder of the passage. There was open war between the forecastle and the cabin-and although we showed our independence, played the old soldier and run athwart the hawse of the officers whenever we got a chance, we gained little by the bargain. but came off second best, as must always be the case in such a contest. In a word, shipmates, we were 'worked up' on every tack, and led a real dog's life-which per-until patience with them ceased to be a vir-

haps, was as good as we deserved 'At length we arrived at Marseilles, and one day after we had been about a week in port, we got up a regular row on board the Whippoorwill, which after both mates had got their eyes bunged up, was put an end to by the interference of the gens d' armes, a set of long-limbed soldiers, with big noses, heavy sabres, and cocked hats. These fellows treated us with little ceremony, and lugged us off to jail, where we were kept on a short allowance of bread and water and garlic, until we bitterly re gretted our foolish refractory conduct, humbled ourselves to the officers whom we had abused, and promised better manners. But this little affair did not sweeten the dispositions of either party; and on the grub, hard usage and a drunken skipper homeward bound passage matters and to boot, is a palace in comparison to a pristhings looked decidedly dark, as Dick on. Besides, this, it might prove a worse Rumpns said, when he capsized a bucket matter than that—a hanging matter for black paint down the cabin skylight, a ght I know—and I am exceedingly all together at the time of the fire, and when the skipper and his friends were at ticklish about the ear. No, shipmates, the lost their lives in attempting to escape er was cold and dreary. Mr. Bufford the second mate, who always had an eye to his own comfort, was rejoicing in a dry pair of woolen stockings and cowhide shoes -afraid of wetting his feet, stepped as gingerly about the decks, as a midnight rob ber in Havana. This was noticed by Len Jackson, one of the old man-of-war's men who seized the opportunity to pay off an old grudge by accidentally dushing two or three gallons of cold refreshing salt water about his drumsticks, which made him ca per like a dancing master, and swear like

You ill-mannered scoundrel! What did you do that for ?' said Mr. Bufford, after executing a pigeon wing, which would have made his fortune on the stage.

'At this moment Mr. Bufford's rage was increased by perceiving a malicious grin-on Jackson's phiz, while he gave a sly-wink to one of his watchmates. This convinced him that the accident was an intentional insult; his temper was roused to the nighest pitch, and on the impulse of the moment he gave the grinning Jackson a dowse on the chops, that sent him stag gering against the bulwarks, and trans formed the grin of satisfaction into a frown

'Ha! that's your play, is it?' hissed Jackson between his teeth, as he recovered his footing, and clenched his fists, rush ed toward the officer, who stepped back a few paces and seized a capstan bar, with which he would have beaten inv shipmate to the deck and extinguished his daylights for ever, if I had not caught him by the arm and prevented the blow. Upon this Mr Bufford called loudly for assistance, and the next moment Jackson clinched him, hugged him in his powerful arms and after a brief struggle threw him with vio lence down into the lee scuppers.

.Mr. Brooks, the chief ma e, alarmed by the noise on deck, and the cries of Mr Buf ford for assistance, now came tumbling up from the cabin, followed unmediately by captain Stanway himself; the watch be low also hastily left their leaky bunks in the forecast.e, and hastened to the scene of action. The battle raged with fury, for Mr. Bufford had risen, and again grappled with Jackson, while Phil. Dawkins, an old messinate and covy of Jackton's, had tackled to the fir-t officer, who was endeavoring to return with interest the left-handed compliments which he received, but being a row,-were ungrateful for good treat- a man of small stature and strength, was

'Captain Stanway on coming on deck quired a strong curb, the whole time, as saw at a glance that the state of things a mass of filames in an almost incredifirm and as taut as a martingale stay to a was alarming-that the crew were in a ble short space of time. But the most mutinous condition, and his mates were painful part of our report is the recital, likely to get a drubbing-and he returned of the loss of human life. to his state room for his pistols. Before you could say 'marlinspike' he was again four new wooden buildings, creeted in a kind disposition, and loth to resort un. on deck, where he found that Mr. Brooks what is called Everett Place. These had been finished by a facer from Phil Dawkins and lay sprawling between the pumps. Poor Bufford fared but little better; indeed he was handled in a very rough and unceremonious manner by Lem Jackson. Dawkins, seeing the captain, with determination in his eye, and a pistol in each hand, coming to the aid of his officers, armed himself with a handspide, and confronted him. As Captain Stanway pre sented the pistol and threatened to kill the first man who disobeyed his orders, Dawkins, a powerful fellow, brandished the handspike as if it had been a belaying pin, and supported by Jackson, dared him 'Captain Stanway fired-Phil. Dawkins dropped the handspike, uttered a groan of agony, and fell beavily on the deck. The report of the pistol, and the fate of their un lucky shipmate, brought the rest of the crew to their senses; and the mates, bruised and bleeding as they were, ranged themselves by the side of their captain; Jackson, myself and two others were at once clapped in irons, in which respectable and comfortable position we were kept, unul the Whippoorwill arrived in Boston and hard work the remainder of the crew had to manage the ship-with nearly half the ship's company laid up in lavender. 'The wound which Phil Dawkins re him outright. When we arrived in porhe was sent to the hospital and whether he lived or died. I never knew or cared.-Charges of revolt were preferred against Jickson and three others of the crew, including myself. Jackson was found to have been the leader in the affray, and was sentenced to imprisonment for a couple of years. The second mate and the stewrd both bore evidence that I caught Mr

Bufford by the arm, at the moment he was going to demolish Jackson with a capstan bar. I was ordered to quarters in jul for seven months; the two others, not having taken an active part in the row escapemore easily. In consideration that they had been two or three months in jail a waiting their trial, they were discharged and I've no doubt became wiser if not bet-

Experience is a good teacher; and you won't catch me engaging in a revolt, or even a row, on ship board, without sufficient reason; for a jail I say again, is a dreary place at best—an old ship with a continual leak, miserable on. THE RIVER AMOOR.

This magnificent river, which runs through the lower part of the Russian possessions, and empties into the head of the dulf of Tartary, is navigable seventeen hundred miles from its mouth to the city of Nerthink, the capital of Southern Siberia. The country is densely populated, and great results are anticipated by the adventurers, who propose opening a commu-nication between our Pacific possessions and the Russian Asiatic territory. Two successful voyages from San Francisco to this river have already been made, and the steamship America, the first of a line of steamers to run between these points, cleared port on the 10th of June heat

A SAD PICIDIE OF THE MORNOWS A letter from Fort Laramie, dated June

We have met with several parties Saints returning from Salt Lake to the States All we met gave a terrible pic-ture of the state of affairs there now. The poorer class had to subsist for months on roots-such as thistle, seco, &c., which he Indians gather and sell to them for one tollar per bushel. The grasshoppers, which caused the famine last year, have comenced again this season, and bid fair to estroy the present crop of wheat and vegnuch dissatisfied with the Mormon faith. and stated that they had been deceived --I'hat the poor had everything taken from them in the shape of tubes and taxes to apport a few leaders in the church. Behis as it may, many of those we met were real objects of pity, and give evidence in their otter destitution, that Mormanism affords but little food for the body at least, let it be as it will with the soul.

DESTRUCTIVE CONFLAGRATION-DREAD-

On Tuesday afternoon, an alarm of fire was sounded which proceeded from North stre t between Fe tand Clark streets. On proceeding to the spot we found that a large bri k buildi g. a led the Jefferson Block, owned and occupied by Cornelius Doherty, wholesale and retale liquor dealer, No. 324 North street, had become fired by the accidental explosion of camphene or gas. Owing to the combustible nature of the stock and materials, the premises became

In the rear of Jefferson Block were and the main building were occupied by forty-eight families. Such was the progress of the fire that it was impossible for all to escape through the place of egress from the back tenements, which wa: a very narrow arch, and a distressing loss of life ensued.

The first body rescued from the rum was evidently that of a boy some fifteen years of age, but he was so charred and and disfigured that recognition was out o the question.

Three other bodies were next taken from the ruins—one nearly all consu med-supposed to be females. The oly of a small boy was also taken out. naving the head on, but the feet entirely gone, and was horribly undistinguish-

Margaret Sweney, wife of John Sweeny, leaped from the 3d story of Doherty's building to the pavement, breaking her right arm and one of her legs. She was taken to the hospital and shortly after expired. Aged about 60 years, Mary Collins, wife of Daniel Collins, umped out of a third story window of the same building, and was instantly killed. She was aged about 64 years, and leaves a family af children.

Three firemen were at work in Barber's alley, upon a ladder, when a chimney fell upon them, killing one and injuring the other two. The dead man's name is Charles W.
