MISCELLANY.

THE LOSS OF THE STEAMSHIP FLORIDA Scenes on Board during the Slorm-Struggles of a Lady for the Safety of her Children.

The following exciting account of the above disaster is contained in a letter addressed by a lady passenger to her sister

APALACHICOLA, (FLA.) Sept. 5, 1856. My DEAR SISTER : I know that you have already been advised of the loss of the unfortunate steamship Florida; and, as you were aware that I intended returning home on her, I feel that you are anxious to learn all the particulars of my very narrow escape from a watery grave.

I took passage on the Florida at Pensacola, Thursday, August 28, at 9 A. M. 1 was accompanied to the boat by a large party of ladies to see me embark and to wish me a God speed.

The weather was pleasant during the earlier part of the day, but grew cloudy towards night, and the sea became very rough, increasing as the night advanced. The next morning I awoke very early, and was so happy to think I would be very soon with my darling husband. I looked out from my window and saw land 1 jumped up and dressed myself and chil dren hurriedly, thinking the ship would be in by the time I could be prepared for meet. ing my darling. Went on deck to see if Apalachicola was not in s ght, when I was told that the ship had been put back, and was then entering St. Joseph's Bay -"This was a sad disappointment to me, but I was better satisfied when the captain told me he was forced to put the ship back because the sea was too high to cross the bar at Cape St. Blas. The weather was pleasant during this day, and I was anxious that the captain should go on ; but the ship remained at anchor all that day.

On Saturday, when I awoke, I felt quite certain that we were again on our way, and was surprised when I learned that the wind was fast increasing into a gale, and that the engines were working in order to prevent the vessel from going ashore.

The wind continued to increase all that day, and the cabin now became quite wet from the beating in of the rain and spray from the sea, and soon there was not a dry place for me to remain in. The cap thin advised me to take the bridal chamber, which I did, and soon got my two little darlings to sleep, and then tried to seek some rest, but not to sleep. The wind continuing to increase, I now became much frightened and begged some one to remain with me. All the passengers went down stairs, and I remained in my state-room as For the killing of John Chavis, in August long as I could, and tried to be calm and -composed. The wind was now blowing a terrible gale, and it seemed each blast was vieing to out do the last. Oh, it was awful! I was told by every one who came where I was that there would be a change in the weather at 12 o'clock for the better or for the worse ; they said it could not be much worse than it was then. Oh, dear sister, you know nothing of the horrors of a storm at sea. before the next wave struck me. It came very near dragging me off. Then some one cried out, "We are going to sea! we are turning the point!" My first impulse was to jump overboard. I wanted to die and be washed ashore rather than be drown-found.

It was a long time before I thought I could give my darling husband up. I wanted to see him once more. Then I thought f my little darlings as dead ; that was the reason I did not op n my eyes. I was so much afraid I would see them floating in he water; that was a sight I wished to die without seeing. I had not heard a word from any one since the man said we were going out to sea, until about six o'clock in the morning, when I felt a han! on my head. It made me shudder, for it felt like the hand of death, it was so cold A voice said, "Oh, my God ! she is dead!" I had my eyes closed, but said, "No, I am not." Some one then said to me, "Hold on, we are ashore; look up and see the trees !" I opened my eyes and tried to look at the trees, but my thoughts were with my two little darlings that I supposed were then floating in the water.

I was then taken where my sweet little Pattie was. The Colonel had got a colored man to take her from that brute who said he would throw her overboard The colored man held her all night, having her wrapped up in a blanket She did not cry, and page his devoirs to the looking glass, but said, "please let me go and see my curls his fine head of hair, puts on an darling mamma" He said he felt awful, as he never expected she would see me ciating cravat, sprinkles his handkeragain.

It is folly for girls to expect to be hap py without marriage; every woman was made for a mother ; consequently children are as necessary to their peace ed in the Gulf and never have my body of Mind, as health is. If you wish to behold melancholy and indigestion, look at an old maid; it you would take a peep at sunshine, look in the face of a young mother. "Now, I wont stand that," replies my aunt. "I'm an old maid myself, and I'm neither melancholy nor indigestible. My piece of mind I'm going to give you in a minute I never would touch a baby, during my existence, except with a pair of tongs .-Young mothers and sunshine, indeed! why, they are worn to fiddle strings before they are five-and twenty. When an old lover steps in, he thinks he sees his grandmother, instead of the dear little Mary who used to make him feel as if he should crawi out of the toes of his boots. Yes, my mind is quite made up about matrimony. But, as to babies -(sometimes I think, and then again don't know,)-on the whole, I believe consider' em a decided humbug. It's a one sided partnership, this marriage : the wife casts up all the accounts .--The husband gets up in the morning, immaculate shirt bosom, ties an excruchief with cologne, stows away a

A CERTAIN DISEASE.

A CLERTAIN DISEASE. When the misguided and imprudent votary of pleasure finds he has imbibed the seeds of his painful disease, it too often happens that an ill-tim-ed sense of shame, or dread of discovery, deters him from applying to those who, from education and respectability, can alone befriend him, delay-ing till the constitutional symptoms of this horrid disease make their appearance, such as ulcerated sore throat, diseased nose, noctural pains in the head and limbs, dimness of sight, deafness, nodes on the ship hores and arms high horrise. on the shin bones and arms, blotches on the head, face and extremities, progressing with frightful ra-pidity, till at last the palate of the mouth or the bones of the nose fall in. and the victim of this awful disease becomes a horrid object of commis-seration, till death puts a period to his dreadful suf ferings, by sending him to "that bourne from whence no traveller returns." To such therefore, Dr. Johnston pledges himself to preserve the most inviolable secresy; and, from his extensive prac-tice in the first Hospitals of Europe and America, he can confidently recommend a safe and speedy cure to the unfortunate victim of this horrid dis-ense. It is a melancholy fact, that thousands fail victims to this dreadful complaint, owing to the un-skilfnlness of ignorant pretenders, who, by the use of that deadly poison. mercury, ruin the constitu-tion, and either send the unfortunate sufferer to an untimely grave, or else make the residue of life mison the shin bones and arms, blotches on the head untimely grave, or else make the residue of l
