GROWING COLD. BY T. S. ARTHUN.

There was an ardor about the young lover that showed how deeply his heart was interested, and his betrothed might almost be said to love only in his pres-ence. He flew to her side, like strel to the magnet, when evening set him free tain coming with a trembling joy that pervaded her whole being. The days After viewing the matter on all sides, and pondering it deeply, Williams came from business ; and she awaited his cerwere long that kept them apart ; but to the conclusion that the only economilightningfooted the hours of evening .- cal change likely to meet his wife's ap-How eagererly they looked forward to proval, was a change from their own that blessed time, when they would home to a fashionable hoarding house. were to A close calculation satisfied him, that. ken that make them one, and the time came at to do so, would lessen their annual exlast, though with slow-pacing steps .-- penses about one thousand dollars .--Hand in hand, and heart beating to heart, they entered a new path of life, carpeted with flowers, and moved onward with springing feet, that took their measure to love's delicious music. Swillly passed the first season of their new existence. It was the warm, fragrant blossom ing spring-time, and the sunshine filled the air with vernal warmth.

How like mould on a rich garment, or rust upon burnished steel, did indifference creep over the pleasant surface of their lives, d mming the mutual at-traction. Williams had energy of character, and a mind that found new strength in difficulty. A man of febler starting wrong, as he did, would have been driven to the wall in a few years. But Williams discovered his error in time to prepare himself for the impending consequences. At the close of five and saw that, instead of being worth many thousands of dollars, he was just on the verge of bankruptcy. It took gers that beset his way. One cause of his trouble lay in the extravagance of his style of living. It rather startled him to find, on examining his own private account, that twenty thousand dollars had been drawn for personal expen-All advartisements inserted in the tri-weekly lars had been drawn for personal expencapital, would have made all safe.

'This will never do,' he said to himself. 'We are living to extravigantly .-There must be a change.' But what would his fashionable wife say to this? Would she be willing to give up her fashionable home, and reof discouragement came over him as these questions rose in his mind.

'She must give it up-she must retir,' he said to himself with some warmth But he did not wish to make known the fact of his deep embarrassment ; for he had no confidence in her power to endure reverses. If she sunk down in weak distress, the burdens he had to bear would be so much the heavier ; and they were quite heavy enough already.

by love's warm sunshine breaking through the leaden clouds of care and folly----what a sad heart-history is here! And is it not the history of thousands of over-earnest business men, and their thoughtless unsympathizing wives, who seek outside of hearts and homes what they can never find-that tranquility of soul after which all aspire, but to which so few attain? Alas, that it is so !

Ah, that we could write, from henceforth, a better reco.d of Leonard Williams and his wife! That we could intellect, less hope, and less suggestion, tell you, how, growing at last weary of their vain existence, they turned back, athirst for the pure waters whose sweetness had once refreshed them, finding again the fountain of eternal youth !---But it was not so. Habits of thought years from the day of his marriage, he and feeting were hardened into that resolutely looked his affairs in the face, second nature which a rarely broken up. It, occasionally, the restless heart returned along its life journey, seeking for some of the lost flowers and vanishhim two years to get safely past the dan- ed tragrance, their sweetness was perceived only as the dim delight of a dream; not real enough to inspire an effort to seek restoration. And so they moved on to the coldness of twilight .---Age found him a sordid irritable, unhappy man----and slie a nervous, restless, Never, Leonard, never l' was almost tremulously whispered back. "That is deep sigh fluttered on his lips ; his g-zimpossible ! Those who truly love, drew itself from the countenance of his love on forever.'

'And with us it is true,' said the husband. "True; warm, eternal love."

And each believed it was so. Let us follow them a little way on their life journey.

Leonard Williams was a young, ambituous merchant, who was trying, un- felt colder towards his wife after that wisely, to do a large business on a small and she was conscience of the coldness, capital ; and Leonard Williams and his without imagining the cause. wife were a young couple who thought rather more of making an appearance in the social world than was consistent with their means and prospects. 'Anna,' he said to her one evening, breaking throug his cold, abstracted silence, "we are living at too costly a rate."

Mrs. Williams turned her eyes upon his face with the manner of one who had heard anpleasant words, but did not ful ly comprehend their meaning.

'It would cost us less to board ; and you would be freed from household cares,' he added.

'Don't think of it, Leonard,' was her prompt reply, spoken in very decided tones. 'I cannot be induced to give up my elegant home. As to honsrhola cares, I am not troubl d by them.

'It is a question of eco. omy,' said Williams.

If that is all, the question may as well sleep,' replied his wife, almost indifferently ; for it costs quite as much to live in a first-class hotel or boarding house as in your own home.'

Williams had no more to say. A wife, and fell to the floor ; his head sunk low upon his Losom, and thought went from his home, to wander among the seething breakers towards which his

The House is within twenty steps of the Ticket Office, where passengers can obtain their Tickets without any trouble, and be in good time after getting their dinner or supper, as there is consid-erable baggage to change. Passengers will please bear in mind that there is a house in front of mine, rented by the other house to keep off opposition, which is called the New Weldon Hotel, but gentlemen and ladies will please recollect that this house has been built on-ly some four, five or six years to my knowledge. please recoilect that this house has been built on-ly some four, five or six years to my knowledge, and has been occupied by three different persons during that time, and has a new Proprietor at pres-ent. This Old Weldon Hotel has been open for two months, and has not had a crowd but once since, but it is now increasing fast in popular fa-vor, as passengers find that the meals suit them and are always ready on the table when the trains arrive from any point. There are red bills printed by the other house with no name attached to them, evidently designed to injure me and my house, but it cannot succeed, notwithstanding the Pro-prietor and his men at the cars are particular in informing passengers that the house to the right is the best, but parsengers find that the house on the hill is not only the best, but that its table is more abundantly supplied with the best, and that the waiters are more polite and attentive to the wants of those who favor it with their presence.
