

We appeal to every reader of THE ROANOKE BEACON to aid us in making it an acceptable and profitable medium of news to our citizens. Let Plymouth people and the public know what is going on in Plymouth. Report to us all items of news—the arrival and departure of friends, social events, deaths, serious illness, accidents, new buildings, new enterprises and improvements of whatever character, changes in business—indeed anything and everything that would be of interest to our people.

The Orphan's Friend, published at Oxford in the interest of the Oxford Orphan Asylum, entered upon its 16th volume last week, with Miss Mattie W. Rountree editor, vice Miss Robin Stubbs, resigned. We wish the Friend continued success. May it live to do much more good for the cause for which it is published.

The negroes of North Carolina show from their actions in the Colored Man's Convention held at Raleigh on Tuesday of last week, that they do not propose to be a tool at the hands of a few white Republicans much longer.

The negro at the South is not to blame for taking action against the Republican party, of which they are the body, they have a right to ask for an equal divide in the honors which that party have to give, and the only way to get at the party is to say that they will not support that party unless they receive some recognition from it.

The Elizabeth City Economist in speaking of the convention says: There assembled in Raleigh on Tuesday a negro Republican Convention, called for the purpose of expressing their dissatisfaction, and protesting against the treatment which the negro members of the Republican party have received in the distribution of the patronage of government since the party has been in power.

From the report of the proceedings of the Convention furnished by the newspaper press of Raleigh the Convention was unique. It was lively, grand, gloomy and peculiar and altho it cannot be characterized as a monkey and parrot convention it was certainly fully impregnated with pepper and salt and smartweed, John William.

son was permanent chairman and the father of the convention. He presided with dignity and orated with force and sharpness. He proclaimed the rights of the negro members of the party in North Carolina, denounced the injustice with which they had been treated and asserted the self respect and the resentment which they had been dealt with. It was a Republican Convention of the purest black or colored blood and a white skin was a badge of dishonor. It was so hot that a white man was not recognized at all.

While the Convention was in full surge Elihu White and Congressman Brower were seen in the room and a Vance county delegate moved that they be invited to the platform to address the Convention. This was objected to by a Granville county delegate on the ground that this was a colored man's convention, and it was not proper that white men should be allowed to participate in it. A delegate from Bertie sustained the objection and said that this was a "black" man's convention, to which his chairman replied that if it were, half of the delegates would have to go out of here.

The matter was becoming serious when the chairman ruled that it was a colored man's convention and that white men had no part in it. So our friend Lint was disabused for and on account of his pale face.

But Cheatham spoke, altho he had been opposed to the Convention. But Cheatham was the color of old bacon, hence his advantage.

But let us be serious. This convention in Raleigh on Tuesday is, to our mind, full of significance and hope for the negro race. It is a move in the direction of self-respect, a higher sense of honor and justice, and a determination to assert their rights and insist upon their recognition by the Republican party in the distribution of the patronage which they have done so much to win. No race of men can attain the full standard of manhood unless they maintain their self respect and assert their manhood. Williamson is right. They should demand their rights, their whole rights the party owes them, and accept nothing less. They should demand it because they are entitled to it. They can command a fair divide if they, in earnest, demand a fair divide. The Republican party is guilty of a great wrong, a great injustice and a great ingratitude to them. They receive greater recognition from the Democratic party to which they do not belong than from the Republican party of which they are true members. As a race Mr. Cleveland did more for them than Harrison. If they tamely submit to it they deserve it.

There is no greater evidence to us of the inferiority and abjectness of the negro race than their relation to the Republican party and their tame submission to the outrages which that party has heaped upon them. They can never be men while they bow their necks to the yoke which the Republican party has so unjustly and so ungratefully placed upon them.

PLATFORM.

ADOPTED BY THE DEMOCRATIC STATE CONVENTION.

RESOLVED, That the Democracy of North Carolina reaffirm the platform and principles of the Democratic party, both State and National, and particularly favor the free coinage of silver and an increase of the currency, and the repeal of internal revenue system. And we denounce the McKinley tariff bill as unjust to the consumers of the country, and promotive of the trusts, combines and monopolies which have oppressed the people; and especially do we denounce the unnecessary and burdensome tax on cotton ties and on tin, so largely used by the poorer portion of the people.

We likewise denounce the iniquitous Lodge force bill, whose purpose is to establish a second period of reconstruction in the Southern States, to subvert the liberties of our people and inflame anew race antagonism and sectional animosities. And we denounce the tyrannical action of Speaker Reed and his abettors who have changed the Federal House of Representatives from a deliberative body into a machine to register the will of a few partizan leaders.

RESOLVED, That we demand financial reform, and the enactment of laws that remove the burdens of the people, relieve the existing agricultural depression and do full and ample justice to the farmers and laborers of our country.

RESOLVED, That the Democracy of North Carolina take a just pride in the able and patriotic course of their Senators and Representatives in Congress touching the great public questions, that have been before them for action, and especially do we appreciate the great ability and zeal of Senator Vance in the protracted contest on the tariff question which reflect honor and credit alike on him and on the State of North Carolina and we cordially commend his re-election to the United States Senate by the next General Assembly of North Carolina and we commend the wise and satisfactory administration of our officers.

WHEREAS the education of the people is essential not only to individual happiness and prosperity but also to the maintenance of civil and religious liberty.

RESOLVED, That the next General Assembly of North Carolina is requested to increase the fund for the maintenance of Public Schools.

RESOLVED Further, that we favor the abolition of National banks, and the substitution of legal tender Treasury notes in lieu of National bank notes, issued in sufficient volume to do the business of the country on a cash system, regulating the amount needed on a per capita basis as the business interest of the country expands, and that all money issued by the government shall be legal tender in payment of all debts, both public and private.

That we favor that Congress shall pass such laws as shall effectually prevent the dealing in futures of all agricultural and mechanical productions, preserving a stringent system of procedure in trials as shall secure the prompt conviction, and imposing such penalties as shall secure the most perfect compliance with the law.

That we favor the free and unlimited coinage of silver.

That we favor the passage of law prohibiting the alien ownership of land, and the Congress take early steps to devise some plan to obtain all lands now owned by alien and foreign syndicates, and that all lands now held by railroads and other corporations in excess of such as is actually used and needed by them, be reclaimed by the government and held for actual settlers now.

Believing in the doctrine of "equal rights to all, and special privileges to none," we demand that taxation, National and State, shall not be used to build up one interest or class at the expense of another. We believe that the money of the country should be kept as much as possible in the hands of the people, and hence we demand that all revenue, National, State or county, shall be limited to the necessary expenses of the government economically and honestly administered.

That Congress issue a sufficient amount of fractional currency to facilitate exchange through the medium of the United States mail.

A NEW COTTON BAGGING.

State Chronicle.

The fight against the jute bagging trust served more than one good purpose. It showed that, if organized and determined, the people could defeat a trust, and it also served to bring out inventive genius and skill. The result is that the cotton crop can be packed in half a dozen kinds of coverings. New manufacturers have sprung up, and they are kept busy trying to get ready for the early rush of cotton to the market.

Several months ago the Chronicle made some reference to a discovery by Wm. E. Jackson, Esq., a well known lawyer, of Augusta, who had perfected a plan by which cotton bagging can be made from the stalk of the cotton plant. A company has been organized with a cash capital of $500,000. It will be the middle of November before work can be done, and it will be impossible to supply any bagging for this season's crop.

This discovery marks the inception of a momentous enterprise, one that looks to the utilization of what was previously regarded as waste. It is an economic triumph which represents a saving of not only the price of a year's consumption of bagging, but also the retention of much of the money at home which went to Indian jute growers. It also creates a market for cotton stalks which have heretofore been a troublesome incumbrance of the ginned fields. They had to be beaten down and burned or plowed in on the succeeding crop. They will now be worth $2.00 per ton and instead of an incumbrance, they will constitute a source of revenue for our farmers.

Again, we see that the cotton plant is the greatest plant in the world, and all of it is valuable. The Charleston news and courier grows eloquent about the cotton plant and says:

We clothe the world with its flabby fibers. The seeds furnish the best grades of "lint" for the tolling millions of two or three continents, the finest quality of material for tables of the rich, and the material for making soap wherewith to cleanse them all. They also supply food for the cattle on a thousand, or so hills, fertilizer for the agriculturist, and their very hulls set forth a nutritious bread which clover becomes as so much kiln dried straw. It is a wonderful plant. We catch rabbits and shoot quails in the fields where it grows. The creeping things which invest it, and attack it occasionally, fatten turkeys better than corn, and between its rustling rows we dig bait wherewith to catch fish or reep, sometimes, luscious grasses that make the best of hay. And now we are to see its bark utilized for all the vast and "various uses to which the jute product is put," while the woody portion of the stalk is to be employed as fuel to drive the machinery of loom and gin and oil mill. Then its ashes no doubt, will be employed to make lye for the soap factory, or to prepare the toothsome "big hominy" of our forefathers, and the ultimate possibilities of the generous plant will have been exhausted.

What a plant it is, indeed! Talk about its being a detroned king—why, it is only coming into its kingdom, and it appears to comprise the whole royal family in its single person.

THROUGH EUROPE.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

Dresden, the capital of the kingdom of Saxony is mentioned in history, for the first time in 1206, and has been the residence of the Sovereigns since 1485. It has a population of about 250,000 and lies upon both banks of the river Elbe. The old part is termed the Altstadt and the more recent the Neustadt. The beautiful environs and the magnificent picture gallery attract numerous visitors, and a considerable English and American community resides here permanently, numbering nearly twenty-five thousand. Yesterday morning we were among the first to enter the Dresden picture gallery, which now ranks with the Louvre of Paris and the Pitti and Uffizi of Rome, as one of the finest collections of art in the world. It contains a vast number of master pieces, representing various schools of art, Dutch, Flemish and especially the Golden Period of Italian art. The radiant magnificence of Raphael's Sixtine Madonnas, in which the most tender beauty is coupled with the charms of the mysterious and void will forcibly strike every susceptible beholder, and the longer he gazes, the more enthusiastic will be his delight. In fact the paintings by the great Venetian masters rank among the principal treasures of this gallery; and none other possesses so extensive a collection of the gorgeously magnificent master pieces of the, to me, greatest master, Paolo Veronese (Paul of Verona). It has been my custom to look for and examine attentively every painting by this inspired artist, since I first saw in the Louvre gallery his greatest masterpiece—The Marriage in Canaan. Many, many years ago, as time goes, I was strolling leisurely through the Louvre, inspecting carefully the various schools of art therein represented, by the choicest specimens, when my attention was arrested and then riveted upon that wonderful painting where our Lord and Savior is represented converting water into wine. To me it was indeed a revelation, and I wish time and space permitted to make a criticism of it. Perhaps, later when I shall be sitting under its shadow, in delightful old Paris, I may make further comments.

In a brief letter like this I can only mention a few of the greatest paintings contained in the Dresden gallery. Here you find Madonnas by every celebrated artist, all possessing great merit and no two bearing the slightest resemblance to each other. I must confess I think the Madonna business overdone. The National gallery in London possesses a few originals and an unlimited supply of copies; and I have more than once wished that a good healthy fire would consume the entire lot. The frequent recurrence of them in picture galleries becomes burdensome to the eye, and to me appears supercilious; like the shrines met with at every cross roads in Italy where our Savior, in wax or wood true to nature, appears nailed to the cross. Among the finest paintings I will mention the Jewish Symmetry by the great Dutch artist, Ruysdael; A. but not THE marriage in Canaan by Paul of Verona. The Gladiator by Peter Paul Rubens, the great Belgian artist, whose last and best painting, "The Descent From The Cross," I have seen and greatly admired in the Cathedral at Antwerp. Andrea del Sarto's large and brilliantly-colored "Sacrifice of Abraham." The Tribute Money by Titian is one of the most nobly-conceived and admirably-executed paintings ever produced. Palma Vecchio's Venus and the Three Graces are among the finest works of this masterly delineator of ripe Venetian beauty. The only works of the Spanish school that demand notice are the fine portrait of an elderly man by Velazquez, and the charming genre-like madonnas and child of Murillo, deservedly a popular favorite. The French school of the 17th and 18th century is represented by a few good works of its leading masters, including two fine landscapes by Claude Lorraine, of magical atmospheric effect. The gallery also boasts of numerous works by the contemporary landscape painters. Paul Brill, Moneper, Vandliden and Jan Breugel.

The opera house here is one of the finest in Germany, and the stage setting in the Queen of Sheba last evening surpassed anything ever seen by me in Europe or America. The music was simply entrancing, and when the curtain fell I could not realize that more than three hours had elapsed.

This morning we took a Drooche, (carriage) and drove leisurely through the principal streets of the city and out into the park. There are many beautiful villas here with beautiful grounds surrounding them, kept in perfect condition. The Bruhl Terrace rising above the Elbe, and fully half a mile in length, is a favorite promenade, commanding a fine view of the river. It is approached from Schloss-Platz by a broad flight of steps, adorned with gilded groups of night, morning, noon and evening, in sandstone by Seilinger. The terrace is planted with trees, and the side next the town is bounded by Buhl Palace and the Academy of art.

The old Palace erected by Augustus the Strong, who ruled over Saxony from 1694 to 1733, is now used as a Museum of Antiquities. Augustus indulged in a plurality of wives, and when his spirit had departed to the realms above, and its earthly tenement had been deposited beside the mouldering bones of his ancestors, it was found that he had left, as a legacy to Saxony, no less than three hundred and fifty-three children. Selah! H. T. JOHN.
