The golden harvest time is almost ended, the pretty blossoms, except a few of the hardiest wild ones have left 'us; the seng of the birds in the forest are hushed, and ere long grim old winter will have bound our fair land with his ley fetfets.' This is indeed the saddest time of all the year. We watch with sad eyes the failing leaves and dying flowers, and our hearts see filled with pain for the sad scenes around us. so and dying flowers, and our hearts'are filled with pain for the sad scenes around us, so suggestive of sorrow and death, brings back the sad, sweet memories of days gone forever, and of dear friends who perhaps sleep in their lowly beds beneath the autumn leaves, or who if living, perhaps we may never meet on earth again. We sit alone perhaps through the long, dreary winter evenings listening to the wind shricking wildly, or sobbing mournfully like one in pain, sod watch the snowflakes, which cover the earth like one vast winding sheet, hiding for a season, its fall beauty, and long with aching heart for the coming of the sweet spring time again; the singing birds, fair, green earth and lovely flowers, but ten times more the companionship and love of our absent friends.

Our farmers are quite busy carrying their crops to market.

Mrs. D. G. Berry and children. Misses Orises and Olivia, have returned from an extended visit to relatives at Heriford. We are ever recey to give our friends the warmest welcome home.

Master Charlie Swain, a nephew of Mr.

Waters, of this place.

That popular young physician, Dr. E. L. Cox, accompanied by his friend, Mr. Webb-Cooper, of your town, paid our old Ridge a short visit on Sunday last. The doctor doubtless deserves the confidence of our people, and is feet becoming the confidence of our people, and is fast becoming a favorite mong them. Our school here closed on Friday, Nov. 7th and quite a crowd assembled to witness the commencement exercises which began the commencement exercises which hogan at 7 p. m., with appropriate vocal music by the school aided by their teacher and his brother, Mr. W. C. Manning, of Martin, which was followed by dialogus, declarations, etc., until long past midnight to the apparent pleasure of all present, the pupits all did well, thanks to their young instructor who did all in his power to assist them. The school then assembled once instructor who did ali in his power to assist them. The school then assembled once mere and sang a touching parting song, after which Mr. Manning in a clear manly youse spoke a short but appropriate fare-well address, refering with tenderest kind. pleasant hours spent with our people and earnestly advising his pupils not to lay their books away, but to fight onward and upward until they reach the shining goal before them. Ah! with what aching hearts before them. Ah! with what aching hearts and tearful eyes did those who had been so long together listen to the farewell words of the teacher who they had all learned to esteem. It seems hard to say good, bye to those who have shared with us the joys and sorrows of school life, we can never quite forget them but, shad that saddest, word of tongue or pen must access or latter be uttered. "Good bye," how often it is spoken, sometimes how lightly, nonestimes when our hearts seem breaking and our trembling lips can scarcely frame the words we clasp the hands of our friends when we part for for days or years or perhaps for, ever neves to meet again until we meet at the Throne of God.

During his stay in our place Mr. Manning

During his stay in our place Mr. Manning by his genial kindly manners and strict attention to his duties won the trust and esteem of the entire community as well as a warm spot for himself in the hearts of his pupils. He leaves many friends and well wishers here who were loth to see him depart, that his young life may ever be crowned with the sweetest blessings that heaven or earth can give is the wish-nay
