FARM LABOR.

Don't Import Labor. Cotton-

Growers Have More

Labor Now Than

They Need.

A great deal is being said lately about plans to import laborers for Southern farms, and somebody suggested that the press should keep this question agitated, but the Southern editors will not do any such thing, if they know what is best for this section of the country. We have laborers enough new in the South to keep the price of cotton down sev- other day as he was about to leave eral cents below what it should be. for his home in a distant State, "I In order to make anything like as find North Carolinians almost everymuch improvement and progress as where I go, and hardly without an justly ought to come to them as a exception they are doing well." It reward for their labor farmers ought every one who left the State during to have not less than fifteen cents a the past fifty years had remained in pound for cotton, and the only way North Carolina how much better off to get the price up to that point is would the old Commonwealth be toto decrease the production. . This day? Our people have at last learned can't well be done if we imagine we are short on labor and begin to import fereign labor to make more cotton. There's already too much labor in competition with itself in the production of cotton in the South. Insteed of importing more we can spare some more laborers for the public works and not be hurt, but benefitted by it.

A limited amount of labor in Southern cotton fields means prosperity for the whole South, but with too much labor it means low-price cetton and the inevitable stagnation of business that accompanies it. Let's stop this foolish talk about wanting more laborers in the cotton fields, for it means harder toil and less pay for those who make cotton, cox. Logan, New York. sold by all drugand less business for the merchants gis.s and less work for our manufacturing enterprises.

With less labor Southern farmers will use labor-saving farming implements and will adopt the plan of "fewer acres with a system of improvement." Fewer acres made more fertile and productive will give greater profits for the day's labor. Therefore, the scarcity of labor will help along toward a better and more profitable system of farming, and we will have improve fields cultivated by home owners instead of worn out Peeple the world over were horrified on learning of the burning of a Chicago theater in which nearly six hundred people lost their lives, yet more than five times this number or over 3,090 people died from paeamonia in Chicago during the same year, with scarcely a cassing notice. Every one of these cases of pneumonia resulted from a cold and could have been preyented by the timely use of Chamberlam's Cough Remedy. A great many who had every reason to fear purmonla have warded it off by the prompt use of this remedy. The following is an instance of this sort: much cannot be said in favor of Chamber" lain's Cough Kennedy, and especially for colds and influenza. I know that it cured my daughter.
