NOVEL LITERARY THEFT.

By Which Many Volumes of Valuable Books Had Been Destroped.

A curious incident in the history of a free library where the rules forbid books to be taken from the building, was furnished by a man who had a mania for poetry. He read everything in that line, good, bad, indifferent. His pockets were always laden with volumes of verse or clippings of rhyme, and he was finally discovered purloining poetry by the most unusual method. For years the library has subscribed to a periodical which at the expiration of each year is bound in book form. There is always a poem on the last page of each issue of the magazine. This man, it was discovered, was removing these last leaves from the bound volume by a unique device. He would lay a wet cord in the book. As soon as the water had saturated the leaf it could be noiselessly drawn from his fellows and folded away in his pocket. In this way he had mutilated twenty-four bound volumes before the injury itself and the personality and method of the offender were discovered. He escaped prosecution for the time being by leaving the city, and the last heard of him he was in the Egyptian

How Shark Are Killed,

The engineers in the British Navy have a very effective way of killing sharks. They seal up a dynamite cartridge in an empty can, and put the can inside a large piece of pork. The pork is thrown overboard on a wire which has been connected with an electric battlery. When the shark takes the bait, the engineer presses a button, which explodes the cartridge and kills the fish.
