WOMEN WHO LIVED AS MIN.

logtances in Which the Deception Was Kept Up For Many Years.

Dr. James Barry, who lies buried in Kensal Green Cemetery, was a wonderful instance of successful concealment of sex, says the London Tit-Bits. At an early age she fell in love with an army surgeon, to follow whose fortunes she assumed the dress of the opposite sex and entered the army as hospital assistant. She displayed such ability that she rose until she was given the post of Inspector-General of the Army Medical Department.

Slight of form and of dark complexion, her general bearing and conversation displayed an almost feminine refinement. A favorite with the men on account of her humanity, her quarrelsome temper by no means endeared her to the officers, and served her in such bad stead that once she was obliged to fight a duel, from which adventure she fortunately emerged scatheless. She died in 1865, at the age of 70.

A female soldier who in 1739 was buried at Chelsea Hospital with military honors, was Christian Davis, better known as Mother Ross. She served for 12 years in the Earl of Orkney's regiment, being present at the battle of Donowert, where she received a musket ball in her hip, and at the engagement of Ramillies, where she was so badly wounded as to require the attendance of a surgeon, by whom her sex was discovered. Some while after this she returned home and received from the Queen a bounty of £50 and a pension for life.

To avoid a distasteful marriage, Sophie Sobine Apitzsch, who was born in Lunzenau, in Saxony, in 1692, took to wearing man's clothes. After several exciting adventures she came across an armorer, one Karl Marlitz whose name, having by some means got possession of his papers, she for hile assumed. One day, however, on being defected blowing the horna privilege reserved in those days for such only as were of noble birth-she was brought before a Magistrate, a certain Herr Volkman, who for some reason known only to himself, thought he recognized in the handsome stranger the Crown Prince of Saxony, Shrewd enough to take advantage of this mistake Sophie Apitzsch accepted not only an invitation to the Magistrates house, but all the costly presents that were showered upon her by tha misguided man.

For some considerable while all went well both with Sophie and her deluded host, in whose brain the most ambitious designs for his daughter Joanna were fast taking shape. But such a gross fraud was bound sooner or later to be found out. And found out it was, when Sophie Apitzsch, brought before the authorities to answer for her fraud, could make but a lame excuse, and was sentenced to be whipped publicly out of the countryin other words, to be conveyed from town to town until the frontier was reached, and flogged publicly in the market place of each. This severe punishment, however, was commuted to a year's imprisonment, whence Sophie emerged to disappear into obscurity, for of her subsequent career history is silent.

New Facts About Pompeli.

The question whether Pompeli was a scaport in the strict sense of the word, says Harper's Weekly, or whether it was separated from the sea by a strip of land, was solved de facto in 1879 by a network of trenches opened by Rurgero across the disputed district. It was ascertained on this occasion that the story of a three-masted ship, in fact, of the flagship of Pliny, alleged to have been found near the farmhouse of Messigua in 1833, was absolutely groundless. The masts, seen and described by the naval architect Glusuppe Negri, were simply trunks of cypress trees.

Many such trunks of expresses have been found since. They mensure, as an average, m. 1,42 in elecomference, m. 0.47 in diameter, which seems to be the proper size for a tree 40 or 45 years old. Their roots are are still planted in the antique humas of the mouth of the Sarno, whereas the trurks are embedded in the laplit of the eruption

With the help of these fossils remains the lint of the unclent seacoust has been traced from Torre Annunziata to Castellanmare, crossing the River Sarno 3,000 feet above its present mouth. The picturesque rocks of Royigliano, the petra Herculis of the Romans, which before the cruption, were separated from the mainland by a channel 1.550 m> ters wide come now within 420 meters of the shore.

Present Day Honeymoon.

Keen observers have noted that newly married couples of moderate means are begining to take a more sensible view of the honeymoon, and even wealthy people are showing a tendency to limit the wedding tour to three or four days in Paris.

The old-fashioned idea that a young married couple must cut themselves off from their friends and spend more money than they can afford at expensive hotels is gradually giving way to the more commonsense practice of disappearing for three or four days.

Some unconventional couples have recently gone so far as to make of their honeymoon nothing more than a week end at a popular watering place, asking their friends to come down for bridge over Sunday. One bride, after two days' absence from London, brought her husband back to her parents' house and gave a series of theatre parties, an innovation which greatly pleased her friends.

Muzzled Women of Murcat. Women of the better class in Muscat all wear muzzles, which barely allow them to open the mouth or see with the eye or speeze.

If there happens to be a Cleopatra in Muscat she will never fascinate any Antony by the beauty of her well shaped nose, for it is kept in a specially made, ugly case, in which it is impossible to tell its shape. But with all its faults this is a far better system than that of cutting off the nose, as men in the Kangra Distriet, in India, are wont to do when any of their spouses have proved too fascinating.

Nowadays a house is known by the bathtubs it keeps.

RHEUMACIDE goes right to the seat of the disease, sweeps all the germs and poisons out of the blood, cleans up all the plaguespots in the body and sets all the organs to work again in Nature's way. Purely vegetable, non-alcoholic, it is yet the most powerful of cleansing medicines, and at the same time regulates the liver, tones up the stomach and builds up the entire system. RHEUMAGIDE is the only remedy that cures rheumatism to stay cured.
