NO STING IN DEATH

Specialist Declares That Death is Painless.

Do we suffer to die? La Lacture, the famous French paper, puts this question, and Dr. Neeker, the eminent specialist, of the Parisian hospitals, answers with a big, round no.

"I have observed and noted with the greatest attention and care," he says, "all the phenomena of that, the most important act of life that is called death, and I can affirm that it is painless. Sensibility, that compound action of the brain, nerves and muscles which produces all our feelings, both physical and psychological, is the first thing to die. It becomes extinct before the animal life ends, and consequently there is no pain in death.

'Death like sleep, is an absolutely inconscient and painless act. Nobody can remember the exact moment he fell asleep and no one has a notion of the exact moment when he dies.

"In some cases when the brain is clear enough to permit the patient to think and reason, the man about to die is only able to have a very faint and hebulous idea of what happens to him. His mind is too confused to make deductions that would necessarily cause intense moral pain.

"As to physical pain, there is none. "When a person becomes so ill that te is about to die, no matter what the Airect cause of his condition might be in other words, when a man is about to die & natural or violent death, the grophic of physical sensibility is so purplete that he would not feel any in even if he be pinched or slashed or in any other way hurt.

"It is logical, therefore, to think that if previous to reaching the agonic r preagonic period he was suffering om any pain, it had disappeared, for here can be no pain where there is an absolute absence of sensibility.

One of the most remarkable buildings in the world is the palace of the King of Siam. It is enclosed in dazzling white walls over a mile in circumference. Within these walls are temples, public offices, seraglios, stable for the sacred elephant, accommodation for one thousand troops, cavalry, war elephants, and an arsenal. There is also a very fine theater, where English, French and German companies frequently perform before the Royal household. The King himself is extremely fond of

The peat is dried under the influence of the electric current and then further treated so that under the action of eleatric cosmose a new compound is formed. It is said to be free from all corrosive influences on the boilers and furnaces in which it is burned.
