

UNITED STATES SENATOR FROM SOUTH CAROLINA PRAISES PE-RU-NA.

Ex-Senator M. C. Butler.

Dyspepsia is often caused by Catarrh of the Stomach—Peruna Relieves Catarrh of the Stomach and is Therefore a Remedy for Dyspepsia.

Hon. M. C. Butler, U. S. Senator from South Carolina for two terms, in a letter from Washington, D. C., writes to the Peruna Medicine Co., as follows: "I can recommend Peruna for dyspepsia and stomach trouble. I have been using your medicine for a short period and I feel very much relieved. It is indeed a wonderful medicine, besides a good tonic."

CATARRH of the stomach is the correct name for most cases of dyspepsia. Only an internal catarrh remedy, such as Peruna, is available.

Peruna Tablets can now be procured. Ask your Druggist for a Free Peruna Almanac for 1909. Peruna is sold by your local druggist. Buy a bottle today.

Living in Hopes.

"I notice that Susie is going with the big, blond German."
"Yes; they seem to be very fond of each other."
"Are they engaged?"
"She doesn't know, but she hopes they are. You see, she can not understand him very well, but so as not to take chances she answers 'Yes' to every question he asks."

The News of the Day.

President Castro, of Venezuela, sailed for Europe to undergo an operation for an abscess.

The hospital ship Relief is four days overdue at Guam and fears are felt for her safety.

Speaker Cannon says he expects Congress to give the people "the kind of tariff revision they voted for."

Every national campaign gives occasion to men of original ideas to invent some catchy device which, because of the interest engendered by the national fight, will be sold by the thousand. One of the most ingenious things put on the market this year is a small tablet, like a medicine pellet, which, when dissolved in a finger bowl, resolves itself into a picture of Taft or Bryan, as the case may be. Already thousands of these tablets have been sold to New York hotels and restaurants.

CAUSE AND EFFECT.

Indigestion and the attendant discomforts of mind and body are certain to follow continued use of improper food.

Those who are still young and robust are likely to overlook the fact that, as dropping water will wear a stone away at last, so will the use of heavy, greasy, rich food finally cause loss of appetite and indigestion.

Fortunately many are thoughtful enough to study themselves and note the principle of Cause and Effect in their daily food. A N. Y. young woman writes her experience thus:

"Some time ago I had a lot of trouble from indigestion, caused by too rich food. I got so I was unable to digest scarcely anything, and medicines seemed useless."

"A friend advised me to try Grape-Nuts food, praising it highly, and as a last resort I tried it. I am thankful to say that Grape-Nuts not only relieved me of my trouble, but built me up and strengthened my digestive organs so that I can now eat anything I desire. But I stick to Grape-Nuts."

PRACTICAL ADVICE ABOUT DIVERSIFIED FARMING

Spurs For Poultrymen.

Do not let very fat old hens be unnecessarily exposed to the hot sun for want of shade and then wonder why they drop dead from apoplexy.

Presumptuous ambition to raise many birds before success has been attained with few has wrecked many who might have done well with poultry if they had started more cautiously.

What poultry pick up on the wide range found on the farm and the good exercise they get when roaming about enable the farmer to raise poultry more cheaply than anybody else can.

Some who think they would like to have oyster shells for their poultry, but who do not like to buy them, can pick up clam shells along streams and pound them up into something quite as good as the prepared oyster shells.

The time is upon us when eggs are expected to be low in price. They are just as wholesome and nutritious now as when they are worth four times as much per dozen, but the average person begins to think he does not like eggs about the time their price falls. This is a queer freak of wide proportions, feeling that eggs are more desirable when they will sell for the most on the open market.

Waterglass is the best medium for keeping eggs in good condition for some months that the farmer can use, but packing eggs in bran or salt is likely to be more convenient for the farmer. Either will keep eggs in fair condition for some time if the eggs are strictly fresh to begin with, but the salt or the bran should extend at least two inches beyond the eggs on all sides, the top and bottom included.

While eggs are cheap those who wish to economize in the securing of food may feel that eggs are being used on the home table so much as to become tiresome. They should consider in how many ways eggs can be prepared for the table, and how different they will look and taste when prepared differently. When using meat that is not salted there is more or less danger that its condition will not be the best in hot weather, and digestive troubles may result. But if eggs are bad, it can be noticed before they are put on the table, and they are to that extent to be preferred.

Apoplexy is more likely to appear among poultry in summer than at other seasons. Extreme heat may cause it. Its immediate cause is a rush of blood to the brain, when a blood vessel is burst. Over-eating or sudden fright may cause it also. If an affected fowl is taken in time treatment may help, but usually it is too late for treatment before the trouble is noticed. The treatment is bleeding from the under-side of the wing, but the bird should not be bled to death. A cool place where the fowl will be quiet should be used to keep the bird in after treatment.

If it is desired to dust a large number of chicks that are at least as large as quills it may be quickly done by a simple arrangement that any intelligent man—and many women—can make at home. Use a barrel that has two fairly good heads, cutting an opening in the end about eight by ten inches, and arrange hinges or buttons to fasten back the part that is removed. The chicks are put in the barrel through this hole, some insect killer is put in the barrel, and the barrel is rolled over the ground. The chicks will flutter and stir up the powder till it penetrates every part of their feathers. There should be a few holes bored in each end of the barrel to admit air and prevent the chicks from being smothered. With such an arrangement a dusting may be given at intervals of a week about three times, so as to kill lice that may hatch from time to time, and the work will be quickly and thoroughly done. Rolling the barrel about a minute is enough.—Progressive Farmer.

Feeding Beef Calves.

A. G. P., Jeffersonton, writes: We have a bunch of pure bred Angus calves which we wish to keep growing and in nice shape to sell as breeders. They are five to six months old and weigh about 500 pounds. Have been running with the dam so far, but we will wean them and put them on grass in a week or two and want to feed, so they will suffer as little setback as possible when the milk supply is cut off. What grain ration would you suggest and how much? We are now feeding them four pounds per head per day of a mixture of equal parts of cracked corn, crushed oats and wheat bran.

Answer: It is a very difficult matter to wean calves that have been raised on the dam without their suffering any setback. The best opportunity to do this is when they are going on grass which provides them with a succulent, nutritious and easily digested food, and one that keeps the digestive system in fine condition. Do not turn them on grass too soon, as young and watery grass is an unsatisfactory food, and particularly for young calves. You have acted wisely in teaching the calves to eat grain freely, and do not think of any suggestions that can be made for improving the ration, though the whole grain can be fed with equally good if not better results than the crushed oats and corn. The mixture suggested is a very good one, indeed, and should be fed ad libitum, though care should be taken to see that the calves do not eat too much. It will be necessary to continue the grain ration and keep them on the best pasture available to keep them from "going back."

Pert Paragraphs.

Another form of tact lies in the ability to arrive at conclusions without expressing them.—Puck.

You can generally fool a lot of people, but it is the man you don't fool who gets you, so what's the use?

The only properly brought up, fed, educated and trained children are those who are born of a childless woman.

As to the amount of grain that should be fed per day, that must be determined by the individual feeder and by the individual capacity of the animals. The vigilant feeder can determine this point by watching the calves daily. A little oil or lard meal might be added to the ration with advantage, from one-quarter to one-half pound per day being sufficient. A tablespoonful of dried blood will also prove helpful at times. These condimental foods supply protein in considerable amounts, and have a toning effect on the system, generally speaking. Dried blood in particular has been found quite useful as a corrective for white scours, and this point should be guarded carefully if the calves are weaned suddenly and put immediately on grass. If the weaning process can be made gradually and the calves taught to eat some bright hay and the grain ration suggested they are not so likely to suffer a setback as if they are cut off from the milk supply all at once.—Professor A. M. Soule.

Plant Ensilage Corn.

When I was growing corn for the silo, and annually putting up 600 tons of it, I always planted my silage corn in July, for there it followed a crop of clover hay on the same land and, in the cultivation of the crop, clover seed were sown again, so that on that rich bottom land I generally got two tons or more of clover hay and twenty tons of corn silage every year. I was engaged in cleaning the bottoms of weeds and making manure for the hills, for with this annual treatment there was hardly any such thing as exhaustion of that bottom land where the soil was nearly ten feet deep, being the accumulation on an old mill pond bottom where the stream had cut a deep channel.

On any moist lowland of good fertility July is early enough to plant the ensilage corn. It then comes in at a comparatively leisure season, where a man grows no tobacco or cotton, and even the cotton will not be pushing much early in September when the corn is ready.—W. F. Massey.

Angora Goats.

There are four points in favor of Angora goats: (1) They will improve pasture by killing weeds and brush. (2) They yield fleeces of fair value. (3) The flock increases with reasonable rapidity. (4) They supply the land with very good fertilizer and distribute it evenly, there being no large piles of it. Sheep are the only other animals that can compete with the goat in regard to point one and two; and, as for improving a pasture, particularly if it is not much brush in it, the sheep do not compete very strongly.

Raise Pure-Bred Cattle.

If our farmers will raise pure bred stock and feed liberally, judiciously and regularly, make and save their own fertilizers and raise stock enough to warrant slaughter houses to come into their midst, they will find a good paying market for good beef stock; otherwise raise, feed and ship in car lots to New York, Baltimore or Chicago at profitable prices.—Progressive Farmer.

When to Cut Alfalfa.

There is one especial point that we wish to call attention to in cutting alfalfa. That is, pay no attention to the blossoming period, but look for the sprouting of the next growth at the root crown. If the sprouts for the next growth are out, cut the alfalfa whether blossoms appear or not. If they are not out, do not cut it.—Hoard's Dairyman.

Cabbage Worms.

The treatment for cabbage worms is to dust the cabbage while the dew is on the plants with a mixture of eighty parts flour or lime to one part of Paris green. As far as my experience goes it seems that heads in which worms have worked rather freely show a decided tendency to rot during hot weather.

Good For Seed.

Treating the seed of corn, okra, watermelons and other seeds a coat of coal tar and then rolling them in dry ashes or dry earth will keep everything from disturbing them to the ground.

Good Ones.

It is generally best to keep on good terms with yourself, even if you have to fall out with people you don't like to do it.

A four-ton elephant was nearly frightened to death by a pig in New York. The only explanation that can be advanced is that, being a lady elephant, the animal labored under the misapprehension that the pig was an extra large mouse.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

TORTURED FOR SIX MONTHS

By Terrible Itching Eczema—Baby's Suffering was Terrible—Soon Entirely Cured by Cuticura.

"Eczema appeared on my son's face. We went to a doctor who treated him for three months. Then he was so bad that his face and head were nothing but one sore and his ears locked as if they were going to fall off, so we tried another doctor for four months, the baby never getting any better. His hand and legs had big sores on them and the poor little fellow suffered so terribly that he could not sleep. After he had suffered six months we tried a set of the Cuticura Remedies and the first treatment let him sleep and rest well; in one week the sores were gone and in two months he had a clear face. Now he is two years old and has never had eczema again. Mrs. Louis Beck, R. F. D. 3, San Antonio, Tex., Apr. 15, 1907."

Rheumatism Prescription.

Considerable discussion is being caused among the medical fraternity by the increased use of whiskey for rheumatism. It is an almost infallible cure when mixed with certain other ingredients and taken properly. The following formula is effective: "To one-half pint of good whiskey add one ounce of Toris Compound and one ounce of Syrup Sarsaparilla Compound. Take in tablespoonful doses before each meal and before retiring."

Toris Compound is a product of the laboratories of the Globe Pharmaceutical Co., Chicago, but it is as well as the other ingredients can be had from any good druggist.

The General Demand

of the Well-Informed of the World has always been for a simple, pleasant and efficient liquid laxative remedy of known value; a laxative which physicians could sanction for family use because its component parts are known to them to be wholesome and truly beneficial in effect, acceptable to the system and gentle, yet prompt, in action.

In supplying that demand with its excellent combination of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, the California Fig Syrup Co. proceeds along ethical lines and relies on the merits of the laxative for its remarkable success.

That is one of many reasons why Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is given the preference by the Well-Informed. To get its beneficial effects always buy the genuine—manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., only, and for sale by all leading druggists. Price fifty cents per bottle.
