"There was for the fellow who moved a half dozen of ours," said the flat dweller. "He charged us $10."

IN CONSTANT TORTURE.

How a Severe Case of Kidney Disease Was Conquered.

Mrs. Sherman Youngs, Schoharie, N. Y., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills saved my life after years of suffering that ran me down to such a degree of weakness that I could do no work, and the pains I suffered would throw me into spasms. I was dizzy, worn and sleepless, my back ached terribly, I had rheumatism and was nervous and all unstrung. I thought I tried every known medicine, but it was not until I began using Doan's Kidney Pills that I began to get help. The pains slowly disappeared, the kidney secretions cleared up and in a few weeks my strength returned so that I could work about the house again. It is three years since then and Doan's Kidney Pills have kept me well."

Remember the name—Doan's. Sold by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Railroad Economy
The economy practiced upon the Great Northern Railroad is well known among railroad men, one of the staunchest believers in the old saying that "Economy is the road to wealth" being the president, J. J. Hill. The story is told in the West that upon one occasion when President Hill was looking over a piece of track he found a new railroad spike. Taking it to the boss in charge of that stretch of road, he handed it to him and said: "You must be more careful. Nothing must be wasted. Pick up all your spikes as you go along."

"Why, Mr. Hill," replied the "boss" promptly, "I've been payin' a man a salary for three years to hunt for that spike."—November Lippincott's.

SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Louisville, Ky.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound has certainly done me a world of good and I cannot praise it enough. I suffered from irregularities, dizziness, nervousness, and a severe female trouble. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored me to perfect health and kept me from the operating table. I will never be without this medicine in the house."—Mrs. S.M.L. Lee, 3223 Fourth St., Louisville, Ky.

Another Operation Avoided.
Adrian, Ga.—"I suffered untold misery from female troubles, and my doctor said an operation was my only chance, and I dreaded it almost as much as death. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound completely cured me without an operation."—LENA V. HENRY, R. F. D. 3.

Thirty years of unparalleled success confirms the power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to cure female diseases. The great volume of unsolicited testimony constantly pouring in proves conclusively that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a remarkable remedy for those distressing feminine ills from which so many women suffer.

FARM AND GARDENS

A Night Hawk.
The louse is a night hawk. It reposes in some crack or crevice of the house during the day, and sucks the blood of the fowls at night. This fact makes it easier for the poultryman to wage a successful war.—Farmers' Home Journal.

Brown Rot in Plums.
Is there anything I can do to keep my plums from the brown rot? I have sprayed them three times with lime, vitriol and Paris green, white washed the trees, and gathered and burned all decayed plums, but every year I lose about half of them. P. T. R.
If by lime, vitriol, etc., you mean that you have sprayed them with Bordeaux mixture in the proper proportion we do not know what more you can do. Possibly you failed to spray them thoroughly. The blue vitriol and lime spray, which is the Bordeaux, is the one used for all fungus diseases. Try it again, being very careful in making and applying it.—Indiana Farmer.

Care of Turkey Hens.
Those of us who have saved turkey hens to raise for this summer must begin to give them a little more care now than we did in the winter.
In the first place they may be slightly "rundown" as we call it, and need a change of feed, or have an acute attack of cold, sometimes mistaken for roup. In this case the affected ones should be penned in a warm comfortable place, and their heads and necks greased with warm lard and turpentine.
When they are cured and ready to turn out they will be real tame, which is so nice about nesting time. If we go out where they are every day, with a little corn or any kind of food for them now, and continue to do so, they will lay near the house, probably in the hens' nests or what they like better still an old barrel, with a little chaffy straw in it, laid down on the side, and some boards slanted up in front to make it dark inside.—M. W., in the Indiana Farmer.

Success With Sheep.
The sire and the dam are the basis of the flock, but the lamb is the basis of the sheep.
Without the lamb there would be no sheep and consequently no profit in the sheep-breeding business.
Thus it is readily understood how very important it is that every lamb born in the flock be kept alive and grown into a salable animal, whether as a mutton lamb or a mature sheep.
This principle of flock management must be thoroughly impressed on the mind and every feature of lamb raising be carefully studied so that this period be approached with everything in readiness to save the lambs.
The sheep-raiser who does not count each lamb as it comes into the world worth its price at weaning time should go into some other business.
With the lamb a constant growth is desirable, so it is quite important that it be liberally supplied at the outset and that this be kept up, if one would succeed as a sheep-raiser.—Weekly Witness.

Egg Tests.
A good egg will sink in water. Stale eggs are glassy and smooth of shell.
A fresh egg has a lime-like surface to its shell.
The boiled eggs which adhere to the shell are fresh laid.
Eggs packed in bran for a long time smell and taste musty.
Thin shells are caused by a lack of gravel, etc., among the hens laying eggs.
After an egg has been laid a day or more the shell comes off easily when boiled.
A boiled egg which is done will dry quickly on the shell when taken from the kettle.
Eggs which have been packed in lime look stained and show the action of the lime on the surface.
If an egg is clean and golden in appearance when held to the light, it is good; if dark or spotted, it is bad.
Sawdust on the floor of the hen house will keep the biddies' feet warm and induce egg production.
Don't make the hens stupid, lazy and unprofitable by over-feeding. The active eager hen is the one that increases the egg supply.—Farmers' Home Journal.

Poultry at the Front.
No branch of the rival industries of the country has made the marvelous advance made by the poultry industry during the last few years. When Secretary Wilson credits poultry with more than six hundred millions of dollars a year he is talking of estimates which are as carefully made as those on which the figures for corn, wheat or cotton are based. The acreage which can be devoted to corn, wheat or cotton is practically all now in use. The room which can be devoted to cattle, sheep or swine can be enlarged only slowly but the field open to the poultry industry business may be increased indefinitely. There has never been such a glut of poultry and eggs in the market that prices fell below the profit point while cattle, sheep and hogs are often produced on so close a margin that profits almost reach the vanishing point. Eggs can be produced at from five to ten cents a dozen with profit while poultry at anything above five cents a pound is good property to own. There is every reason to believe that the prices of poultry and eggs will continue to run in the future as they have in the past while the cost of production is not likely to increase materially for a long time to come. Any one who begins the poultry business begins with the assurance that his market is already made and that profits are certain.—Farmers' Home Journal.

When the Fat in Milk.
We are often asked the old-time question, "Can I increase the fat in my milk by feeding the cows feed rich in fat?" We answer, no, not to any appreciable extent for any great length of time, only by increasing the quantity. The percent of fat in milk is an inherent quality and is beyond the power of man to change very much.
But where does the fat in the milk come from? Must the cows be fed feeds rich in fat?
The New York station has answered that question through the untiring and careful investigation of Prof. Jordan. He found that the cow did not take the fat from her food to put into the milk or to make fat in her body to any great extent. He fed cows feed from which all possible fat had been extracted, but they gave the normal amount of milk of normal tests, besides adding to their body weight.
Nor did they take this fat from the protein in the feeds. They must have taken it from the carbohydrates—the feeds containing sugars and starches.
It would seem that we need pay no attention whatever to the amount of fat in feeds. But do not jump at conclusions. Perhaps these fats add palatability or perform other important functions of nutrition. It seems strange that almost every grain and grass should contain fat if it had no use in animal nutrition for which these feeds were doubtless created.
It is very easy to feed more protein than the animal uses in forming any of the nitrogenous elements of the body. Is the rest wasted? Some doubtless is, but the rest has some function we may be able to determine. We do not know that it is a most essential in feeds and one that we pay most for. If it should not all be consumed by the animal in the process of digestion it may play an important part in stimulating some organs or doing a necessary work.
We need pay no heed to carbohydrates in feeds—other than see that it is palatable and digestible. There is more than a sufficiency of this element in all of the common farm feeds. But now that we know that it may be changed into butter fat worth $500 a ton which, when sold from the farm, takes away only a few cents' worth of fertility, we are bound to think more highly of this cheap and abundant element in feeds.—Southwestern Farmer.

Notes.
Fed regularly and properly the calf nurtured on skim-milk will grow as rapidly as a calf fed upon whole milk.
If you want to know what green feed will do for hogs, just divide yours into two pens, one with plenty of grass and the other one with none.
Sheep respond splendidly to good care, and are capable of utilizing and turning to profit foods that can be grown by any up-to-date farmer.
Hot days and no shade will make the sheep grow thin. Get them into a pasture where there will be some shelter from the rays of the sun, if you can.
One good brood sow will bring you in as much clean money as the best cow on the farm, but you must know how to keep, feed and otherwise deal with that sow.
Flaxseed fed carefully will keep the colt's coat in fine condition, bowels free, and will promote an even development to the muscles of the legs and the whole body.
Where ticks are found on cattle, a sure way to get rid of them is to go over the cattle with a sponge well moistened with crude petroleum; repeat when necessary until all ticks are destroyed.
The cow that is constantly in fear of a blow or harsh word will soon begin to shrink in her milk flow. She is a nervous animal easily excited and fretted and susceptible to harsh or kind treatment.

Must Stay in the Game.
This bromide remark was made by an acquaintance of a woman who, on Tuesday, drank a cup of deadly poison. "She was disgusted with the illusions of society. Although she had everything money could buy she was the most unhappy woman in the world." And so she made an end of it all. The woman was surrounded with the power to uplift and bless others, and yet she saw no way of escaping from her nightmare of selfishness. She left a note with only these words: "The game is not worth the candle." And yet she held a good hand and, as the pack showed, had she discarded her knaves she would have filled with hearts. But you cannot win unless you stay in the game.—Brooklyn Eagle.

"My little boy had an awful rash all over his body and the doctor said it was eczema. It was terrible and used to water awfully. Any place the water went it would form another sore and it would become crusted. A score or more physicians failed utterly and dimly in their efforts to remove the trouble. Then I was told to use the Cuticura Remedies. I got a cake of Cuticura Soap, a box of Cuticura Ointment and before we had used half the Resolvent I could see a change in him.
