

"Goodness, Jane, what a kitchen!" exclaimed Mrs. Brown. "Every pot, pan and dish is dirty, the table in a perfect litter, and—Why, it will take you all night to clear things up! What have you been doing?"

"Sure, mum," explained Jane. "The young ladies has just been showing me how they bile a pertater at their cookery school!"

"No, I know nothing about music."

"All you have to do is jangle this cowbell."

"But suppose I come in at the wrong place?"

"You can't do that in jazz."

Mrs. Snap—Do I look all right in my new dress, dear?

Mr. Snap—Better get in a little farther, if there's room.

"Our minister is so good that he won't even perform a marriage ceremony."

"What's that got to do with his being good?"

"He says his conscience won't let him participate in any games of chance."

"Mother," said Cleopatra, "this life doesn't appeal to me. I want to be a stenographer."

"Don't be silly, child," retorted Mrs. Ptolemy. "Chewing gum has not been invented yet."

"Girls were harder to kiss in your day, weren't they, grandpa?"

"Mabbe, mabbe," ventured the old gentleman, "but it wasn't so blame dangerous. The old parlor sofa wouldn't smash into a tree about that time."

"Little Johnny wants to be an angel," said the fond mother. "Is not that cute?"

"I see," said the father, who knew more or less. "His thoughts are on chorus girls already."

Visitor—You must have been visited by a bad hurricane from the appearance of your buildings.

Farmer—No; I rented my farm last month to a movie concern to make a five-reel comedy.

The old offender volubly protested his innocence. But the judge was not convinced.

"I wouldn't believe you," he said, "if you swore on a dozen Bibles. Whatever you said, I'd believe the opposite to be true."

Then the prisoner said: "Your worship, I plead guilty."

As the cab rolled through the dark streets muffled shrieks and sounds of a struggle came to the ears of the driver. He stood it as long as he could, then, being a conscientious man, turned, and said with some heat:

"Listen, buddy! I don't mind necking parties, but you can't stage a wrestling match in my cab with something half your size. I'll not see you taking advantage of the little girl."

Then the little girl said: "Poke your head where it belongs Frog-Face. How can he help it if I'm ticklish!"

He was a darky on trial for making whisky.

"What's your name?" asked the judge.

"Joshua, suh."

"Are you the Joshua that made the sun stop?"

"Naw, suh—I see the one what made the moonshine."
