

The Judge's Joke

A NEW YORK BOXING LAW PROHIBITS FIGHTING UNDER TWENTYONE—I DON'T BELIEVE IN GETTING MARRIED TOO YOUNG EITHER—

A jazz band is a group of citizens who are paid for playing static.

"Dick was almost drowned last night."

"No! How come?"
"The pillow slipped, the bed spread, and he fell into the spring."

The boss: "Robert, I hope you try to save half of what you earn."

Office boy: "I don't get that much, sir."

During the World War one of the great steamships that was used as a transport for soldiers was on her way across when a torpedo boat was sighted. In anticipation of the danger they were in all on board were lined up on deck.

There was a deathly hush for an instant, when suddenly from down the line a negro's voice rang out: "Is dar ennybody heah dat wants to buy a gold watch and chain?"

A Tramp knocked at the back door of an old-fashioned house, he said in a whining voice: "Please kind lady, I'm a sick man. The doctor gave me this medicine, but I must have something to take with it." The woman, who was kind-hearted, said: "Do you want a spoon and a glass of water?" "well, mum," answered the tramp, "I wouldn't trouble you, but it says on the bottle, 'To be taken after meals.' Have you a meal handy?"

Dum—Why do they always call a sailboat she?

Bell—Because the rigging costs so much.

Dum—No; because they make a better showing in the wind.

Dean—Where are your parents?
Girl—I have none.

Dean—Then where are your guardians?
Girl—I have none.

Dean—Then where are your supporters?
Girl—Sir! You are forgetting yourself.

A bishop noticed a small boy playing in the gutter.

"What are you doing, my little man?" he asked.

"Making a kerfedrat," replied the boy.

"A cathedral! But where's the bishop?"

"Oh, I ain't got enough mud to make a bishop."

An elderly spinster, well known as a lecturer, was awakened one night by the sound of creaking floor-boards. She saw the outline of a burglar. Instead of screaming in sheer fright, she calmly extracted a revolver from beneath her pillow, switched on the electric light, and addressed the miscreant:

"Instead of sending you to prison I am going to give you a chance. And to help you to take it I will outline for you my lecture on 'Criminal or Citizen? How the law-breaker may win back his self-respect.'"

About an hour later there came a frantic ring on the telephone in the local police-station, and an anguished voice said:

"There's a burglar in Miss Jones' bedroom at Send the police at once."

"Right!" came the reply. "That is Miss Jones speaking, I suppose?"

"No," came the melancholy answer: "this is the burglar."

Judge: "Ten days, or ten dollars. Take your choice."

Prisoner: "I'll take the money, your honor."

About Your Health

Things You Should Know

by John Joseph Gaines, M. D.

REST.
Rest is in no way related to laziness. One cannot be said to rest unless weary. Rest is the antidote for intensive action; it is our best reconstructive, and, like most valuables, should be earned to be enjoyed.

There is no equal for rest in the restoration of tired nerves or flagging energies. Medicines are poor substitutes for rest, if indeed they are substitutes at all. Often have I recalled the prescription of the meek and lowly Nazarene, when he beheld the tempest raging and said, "Peace; be still." When the nerves are taxed to the uttermost, sleep impossible, the mind, urged beyond its capability, totters on its throne, then rest—rest—unless rest is secured disaster is imminent. The well-ordered man will not permit anything to disturb his rest hour.

In these hurry-scurry days we seem to forget that rest is an essential to human life and happiness. We forget that a worn-out mind is even worse than a worn-out body, as we swing in our swivel-chairs and order a "bromo" for the headache. What rebels we are, turning night into day and day into default! We ignore the law of rest and wonder why we do not feel well.

Some very ignorant, unthinking people seek stimulants when tired. This puts off the crisis for a time, but not for long. No break-down comes without warning in time. We should heed the call of rest, even though it is only a whisper. To evade it is to hear at some critical time the shout of outraged Nature: "Fool, take thy penalty fully earned!"

POINTED PINE PARAGRAPHS by O. H. L. Wernicke, President Pine Institute of America, Inc.

When a merchant sees the pillar of smoke from a forest fire in his county, he should say, "There goes some of my trade into the clouds. It means losing business now, and for fifteen years to come, that I might have had. The man who set that fire will have poorer grass for his live-stock, hence poorer stock, and therefore less money to buy with. The owner of that land will have fewer trees and slower-growing trees, and therefore less money to buy with. Yes, there goes some of my trade."
