Good Citizen Leaves

This newspaper voices the sentiments of the entire community in lamenting the loss of Rev. Theodore Partrick, Jr., who delivered his farewell sermon here last Sunday at Grace church. Next week he leaves for Scotland Neck, where he will make his new home and assume the rectorship of the Episcopal church at that place.

He came here from a theological seminary in Alexandria, Virginia, in January, 1921, and assumed charge of Grace church. His achievements here are recognized as among the very best of Plymouth's assets, and his value as a citizen as well as a minister cannot be computed by an ordinary mind, consequently we shall not attempt to express in words the feeling and appreciation that is in our heart. It's impossible. Eulogies are usually written for those who have departed for another realm of which we know little, but if ever we were seized with a desire to eulogize the living that desire is now gripping at us.

He is a fine Christian gentleman, possessing all those splendid attributes of character that endears any person in the hearts of a community. This man will be missed by people from all walks of life, and in all elements of civic existence. He is an Episcopalian, but enjoys an equal regard from all other religious denominations as is accorded him by the laity of the belief of his choice.

He goes to Scotland Neck eminently equipped in both heart and mind to serve the people of that community as a teacher of the theories of the Bible and to exemplify the spirit of brotherly love.

Chief Means Business

Chief Brown told us this week that he had made a personal call upon all property owners in Plymouth that had vacant lots on which a rank growth of weeds and grass was flourishing, and warned them that if they did not have them cut down that he would use the street crew and do it himself and compel the owners to pay the cost of the operation.

There are a great number of careful property owners in the town that are using practically all their spare time in making improvements in the appearance of their property. No matter how hard these people work and how much they accomplish the maximum improvement will not have been attained until their neighbors do likewise. It is a source of much satisfaction, however, to note that the careless are greatly in the minority and if the proper persuasion is used it will be only a short time when all the premises of the town will be in a neat and orderly state.

Chief Brown seems to feel that it will not be necessary for him to employ his regular crew and material in cleaning up neglected premises, for he has an idea that the heretofore careless and neglectful property owners will give him all the co-operation possible. We hope so.

CONTAGIOUS DISEASES

The following is the list of contagious diseases reported in Washington County for the month of July 1926.

WHOOPING COUGH:
 Plymouth; Daphne Watkins, E. C. Watkins, Olivia Potat, Moses Hooker, Jr., Bernice Smith, John E. Smith, Colleen Smith and Sbulia Sykes.

TYPHOID FEVER:
 Plymouth; Edward Spruill Creswell; Alton Spear, Roper; Haywood L. Spruill, Junius Spruill and Sarah J. Spruill. Plymouth, R. F. D. 2; C. W. Barnes and Alton Biggs. W. H. WARD, M. D. County Health Officer.

More Wisdom
 ("The teeth should not be brushed across or up and down both ways, as is usually done.")—Another health hint from a lecture this week in London.)

My child, if you would shine today,
 Attend with care to what I say.

The modern rule for health and bliss,
 May briefly be described as this:

Whatever you have ever done,
 Assume that it is wrong, my son;

Whatever you have done before,
 You must not do it any more.

Don't brush your teeth across or down,
 Or up; it makes the expert frown.

(To keep them fit as any fiddle,
 Brush back and part them in the middle.)

Rich foods internal ills provoke;
 Lunch lightly off some well-boiled coke.

An upright posture strains the head;
 Try walking on the hands instead.

When influenza reappears,
 Try breathing deeply through the ears.

Thus every day and every way
 Give modern methods fuller play.

Try writing letters with your toes
 And hearing through your eyes and nose.

But, more important far than that,
 O, keep on talking through your hat!

Teacher: "John how many bones have you in your body?"
 John: "About a million."
 Teacher: "That a great deal more than I have."
 John: "Well, you didn't have fish for breakfast like I did this morning."

"George," said a pompous squire to an old farm laborer, "you are getting very bent. Why don't you stand up straight like me?"
 "Well, sir," answered George "d'ye see yon field of corn?"
 "I do," said the squire.
 "Then ye'll notice that the full heads hang down, while the empty heads stand up."

They met by accident in a bank and before long were exchanging loud words. Evidently there was an old grudge between them.
 "You looked down on me when I was poor," bawled one. "Today I can write my check for a million."
 He wrote a check for a million.
 "Now I'll show you what I think of a million." He tore up the check.

Tramp: "Will you please give me a quarter for a bed?"
 Man: "I dunno, let me see the old bed first."

Englishman (eating a fish cake for the first time): I say, old chap, something has died in my biscuit."
 "Do you like codfish balls?"
 "I don't know. I never attended one."

"Haven't you anything at all to give me ma'am?" pleaded the tramp. Can't you see that I'm in need?"
 "I can, indeed, my poor man, replied the kind hearted lady, moved to tears. "Here is a cake of soap."
