REAL RIME
The man who races with the train
Or drives with carelessness insane,
Who always tries all cars to pass,
But to Bray to be an ass.

The dresses now are quite a rage.
It seems to me we've reached an age
When children must grow very tall
To hold to mother's skirt at all.

Of all the foolish things I've seen
The best were staged by Silas Green.
His legs were wooden, so they say,
Yet every week he bought 'Blue Jay'.

"I must be looney" said Prof.essor Napp
As he endeavored to hang the map.
"This nail is moving, or else my eye—
Oh no, Professor, the nail's a fly."

Cop—What! Your husband
fainted at the wheel?
"Yes! That woman signaled
she was going to turn left and then she turned left!"—Judge.

"Quick, Sam, a wildcat's jes run into tha' house with yer wife."
"Wal, he'll jes' have to get out the best way he can!"—Judge.

TOO BIG A RISK
She had never done wrong,
And nobody was purer;
She was too good to live—
So they wouldn't insure her.—

Women now not only buy their clothes on the installment plan—
they wear them the same way.—
