STELL NAMED COUNTY GAME WARDEN

Harry Stell received notice of his appointment as Game Warden and Fish Commissioner of Washington County this week. He is authorized to issue license and protect the game and fish of this section and to enforce the recent acts passed by the 1927 General Assembly in connection with this work.

The State Department of Conservation and Development is trying to curb the slaying promiscuously of animals at any time. Seasons for the sportsmen to take or kill these animals have been decided. Seeing the posters or asking advice of the game warden will inform a person of these seasons.

There are three classes of license issued. County license, resident state license and non-resident state licenses. Licenses can be secured in this county from the clerk of the superior court or from the game warden. Hunters must carry license with them while hunting and also to wear the hunters button. Licensed hunters are required to observe the trespass law and decline to hunt on forbidden land.

Laws passed by the recent General Assembly makes it unlawful to hunt without license, take or kill birds out of season, kill a female deer under 5 years, buy or sell any game except rabbits, to trap or poison, hunt by auto or boat, to bait any upland game. These acts will be enforced, states Warden Stell.

BEST PROFITS ON ORGANIZED FARMS

It is possible to so organize the farm business that it may return the owner the greatest profits.

Such is the conclusion reached by Dr. G. W. Forster, agricultural economist at State College, who has just prepared bulletin number 252, "Profitable Farm Combinations" based on studies made in the coastal plain section of North Carolina. The bulletin is issued by the North Carolina Experiment Station and is available to the farmers of the State free of cost.

"To show how the farm may be organized, they have presented in this bulletin certain definite combinations of crop and livestock enterprises," says Dr. Forster. "These combinations are called standards. While they are not actual farms, they have been developed from accurate information carefully gathered from farms now being operated in the lower coastal plain. As a standard, they have selected that combination of crop and livestock enterprises for a given amount of land, labor and other items which appears to be the most profitable under conditions not only as they exist on these farms today but also in the years immediately ahead."

Dr. Forster makes it clear that these standards are to be used as guides to those who may want to reorganize their farms. Normal prices have been used in fixing the standards and some changes might be made annually based on the reports issued by the federal and state authorities. Especially valuable in this, is the outlook for crops and livestock which is prepared each year about February first. However as a usual thing, farmers should organize their farms on a long time basis and drastic changes in operation should not be made unless economic conditions change radically.

Washington Clinic Invites Local Cripples

Washington county cripples are invited to avail themselves of the possibilities of improvements offered them through treatment by the Washington Orthopaedic Clinic of Washington. This clinic is held each month at the office of the Beaufort County Health Department in the Post Office building. The first meeting will be held today.

Crippled children and disabled men and women with clubbed feet, deformed backs, crippled hands, arms and legs will have their deformities corrected through treatment offered them gratis by this clinic.

This clinic will meet once a month. Free examination and treatment of indigent cripples including adults is offered on the last Friday in the next eleven consecutive months.

This clinic is held under the auspices of the Washington Rotary Club and will be in charge of an expert orthopaedic surgeon. It is held under the supervision of the North Carolina Rehabilitation Department. Every disabled resident of this county is invited to attend.
