

Jim Arnold Found Not Guilty; Creswell Boys Have Free For All Fight

Recorders Court consumed all of Tuesday and Wednesday of this week and the docket was not completely cleared then. Only three cases were tried Tuesday and two Wednesday. Two of the cases tried Tuesday were cases in which a mistrial had been called.

The first case brought up Tuesday was the case in which Nathan Phelps was charged with having committed assault with a gun. He was found not guilty.

The case of Lenwood Spruill, was found not guilty on a charge of assault, which grew out of a case in which Raymond Patrick was found guilty two weeks ago on a similar charge.

The case of State against Jim Arnold for assault on Mrs. Studie Barnes with a deadly weapon, with the intent to rape, consumed all of yesterday afternoon and the jury stayed in the jury room approximately one hour before returning with a verdict of not guilty. This case was taken up right after dinner and was not completed until 7:30 in the evening. In the last trial, which was held two weeks ago, the jury vote stood five for acquittal and one for conviction. Arnold was charged with having entered Mrs. Barnes home in the absence of her husband and push her on the shoulder, causing her to touch the side of the bed. At the same time he pushed her he is alleged to have said, "Let's do it."

The case of State against Wilson Millard, Jordan and William Davenport and Jack Spruill, all of the Creswell community, came up for trial Wednesday and consumed a larger part of the day. The Davenport boys were charged with engaging in an affray and conspiracy against Jack Spruill, who was in turn charged with engaging in an affray. Wilson Davenport and Jack Spruill were found not guilty and William, Millard and Jordan Davenport were found guilty of simple assault.

MANUFACTURER INCREASING ITS PRODUCTION

The wide acceptance of the complete Willys-Overland line of commercial cars and trucks indicates that the current year will be the largest in the history of the company's industrial division. Not alone are the domestic registrations making a decided impression throughout the nation but the export demand exceeds that of any previous year.

It is an interesting fact that February output of the commercial and truck units was increased over the original production schedule set in January. This increase according to executives of the company, was necessitated through demand from the field.

The vast manufacturing facilities of Willys-Overland, with plants situated at advantageous parts of the country, make it possible to speed up the production and distribution of this wide variety of commercial and truck units. The line comprises an excellent range, beginning with the Whippet Four commercial chassis in the lowest priced field. Following these units come the Willys Six light delivery commercial chassis, the Willys Six 1 1/2 ton chassis, and the Willys-Knight Model T-103 1 1/2 ton chassis. The latter is powered by a six cylinder Willys-Knight sleeve-valve engine.

Through a nationwide network of body building plants which are under arrangements to furnish bodies for the Whippet, Willys Six and Willys-Knight commercial car and truck chassis, buyers are assured of immediate fulfillment of orders regardless of the type of body ordered.

EFFORTS BEING MADE TO REPLETISH QUAIL WASHINGTON COUNTY

With the increased number of hunters and their range continually extending because of the assent of automobiles and our splendid roads, it has become impossible in many localities to maintain a supply of upland game, without artificial propagation.

Our Quail are becoming scarce in many sections. The Wood-cock is no where abundant.

Sportsmen turn into the Department $200,000 annually, through the purchase of Hunting Licenses. It is natural that these Sportsmen want something more than merely an "Armed Walk" through the country in exchange for their dollars.

Propagation of the ringnecked pheasant is therefore one of the State's contribution towards maintaining the healthful sport and recreation, and the food value, that is derived from hunting. In distributing pheasant eggs throughout the State, the Department is not only supplying a splendid game bird but is actually conserving the fast waning supply of native game birds, by providing a substitute to which many sportsmen are glad to direct their energies.

The ringnecked pheasant is admirably adapted to large scale stocking of the cover of the State. It prefers open sections, thriving in small thin patches of woods, and finding cover that it likes in the bushes along fences, under hedges, and in the grass and weeds that cover so many waste places in the country. Best of all, it has been demonstrated, after many years of careful experiment, that the pheasant can be produced in very large numbers and at a comparatively small expense. On the other hand, all attempts that have so far been made in extensive propagation of the quail and ruffed grouse by artificial methods have been unsuccessful. Not only are ringnecked pheasants very prolific, but they are also exceedingly hardy. Severe cold and deep snows have no terrors for them. Furthermore the fact that their food consists largely of insects and seeds of noxious weeds makes them a valuable asset to all farming communities.

As in the case of poultry, the number of persons who can rear pheasants by the thousands is limited when compared with those who are able to raise a small number. Therefore, if the pheasant is to be retained permanently as a member of the State's bird life, the supply must come from a large number of small breeders rather than from wholesale production on a large scale.

On this basis, our Game Farm produces several thousand of pheasants' eggs, which are distributed annually to applicants in all parts of the State, in addition to those eggs which are retained for hatching at the Game Farm. In cooperating with the Department by hatching these eggs and liberating the young pheasants, farmers and sportsmen are benefiting themselves, by increasing the supply of one of the best game birds that is known in any part of the world.

It must be borne in mind that in accepting pheasants' eggs from the eggs Conservation Department a person makes a moral contract to give every attention to proper care of the shipment placed in his charge. The eggs entrusted to him are always the property of the State, as are also the pheasants that are raised, and no personal advantage may be derived from them. At the State Game Farm every detail of the care and management of the adult pheasants, with the object of large egg production, has been worked out. It is expected that every applicant for eggs will use the same painstaking care in that part of the work which he has volunteered to do, with the result that the pheasant will be firmly established as an important game and food asset in North Carolina.

Asst. State Game Warden.

FUQUA HURLEY MISSIONARY SOCIETY MEETS

Roper:—The Fuqua Hurley Missionary Society of Roper Methodist Church held its regular monthly meeting, at the home of Mrs. C. E. Mizelle, Monday afternoon at three o'clock.

Devotional exercises were conducted by the president, Mrs. J. B. Hurley. A very interesting program on the subject, "Our Wesley House," was rendered as follows: Hymn, "Something for Jesus;" Society Reading, "The Wesley Community House"—Mrs. J. B. Hurley. "List of Places Having Wesley Houses"—Mrs. H. M. Williams. Hymn, "Take My Life and Let It Be"—Society.

The roll was called and minutes were read by the secretary. Reports from committees were given.

After the benediction by Society, refreshments were served by the Hostess.

IN MEMORIAM

In memory of John Grimes Jr. who died three long years ago, March 8th.

I cannot say, and I will not say that he is just away, with a cheery smile, and a wave of the hand he has wandered into a Heavenly Land.

II. And left us dreaming how very fair it needs must be, since he lingers there. And we, O we who the wildest yearn for the old-time step and the glad return.

III. Must think of him faring on as dearly love there, as in the love here; for we dream of him still as the same, and say, he is not, dead but just away, living in the garden with Gods little children.

By His Mother,
MRS. J. W. GRIMES

FOR REPRESENTATIVE

By the request of my many friends I have decided to announce my candidacy for Representative of Washington county, subject to the Democratic Voters.

I have never split, or scratched a ticket in my life, and I have always voted the straight democrat ballot. I am in favor of reduction of taxes on real estate as much as forty or fifty per cent. This I think can be done by a general sales tax. If I am successful in the Democratic Primary and in the General Election I will call a meeting of all the voters in each precinct to discuss the problem of reduction of taxes.

I shall appreciate the co operation and support of the voters of Washington county.

Signed:
[Adv.] CAPT. C. E. MIZELL.

FEDERATION AT MACKEYS MARCH 28th

Mrs. Geneva Flannery, from Knoxville Tenn. will be the main speaker for the Federation of Washington County Home Dem. Club which meets at 2:30 in the Mackeys High School auditorium Friday March 28th.

Every Club in the county is interested in winning the beautiful trophy cup given the Federation by the Chamber of Commerce.

The Mackeys, Pleasant Grove, and Swain Club will be hostesses and the other clubs of the County will be well entertained.

Funeral services were conducted Tuesday afternoon by Rev. G. T. Cantrell, pastor of the Plymouth Baptist Church for Bob Stubbs, 23 years old son of Mr. and Mrs. Woodson Stubbs of this place who was electrocuted Monday morning at about eight o'clock. Young Mr. Stubbs was in the employ of the Pierce Electric Company, installing electric fixtures for the Chicago Mill and Lumber Corporation.

According to information gathered from an eye witness, young Mr. Stubbs and Jessie McNair were wiring a switchboard. On Sunday it seems that workmen had installed a motor and had it wired through the switchboard so that it was not necessary for the switch to be thrown in order to start the motor. Another wire, running to a hog, was connected through the switchboard but was not in use at that time. A workman was sent down to start the motor, and not knowing that it was not necessary to turn on the switch, he did so. This turned 440 volts in the wire running to the hog. Both McNair and Stubbs had moved the same wire a number of times during the morning and it was thought that it was dead. It is thought that when young Stubbs started to move the wire after it was charged, he grabbed the switchboard which gave him a solid ground, thereby causing approximately 2200 volts to pass through his body. He died practically instantly. There was only a short burn on his left hand.

Bob Stubbs was the third member of the class of 1928 of Plymouth High School to meet death accidentally. He was also the last of three pals to die in the past two years, one of which was accidentally killed. While in school, Bob took part in all athletics and was one of the most popular members of the student body. He was well liked in the town by both old and young.

He leaves to mourn his death a host of friends; mother and father three brothers and two sisters.

POET AND PEASANT

"I notice that someone has begun work on the old Third street graveyard," said the Peasant.

"Yes," replied the Poet. "Joe Jackson has asked that someone help him have the place cleaned off but he received no cooperation so he hired someone himself and began work on beautifying at least the part on which he has loved ones buried."

"If the rest of folks who have loved ones buried there don't care to come in with Mr. Jackson," said the Peasant, "it seems to me that now they would feel hurt and go ahead and do the work themselves on their own lots."

"I am sure they will," said the Poet.

"Oh, no they won't," said the Peasant. "They are too lazy and stingy and they don't have any pride in the looks of their town, much less love for those who have gone before them. Probably they gave their loved ones their bouquets before they died. At least if they didn't those poor souls will never get any bouquets."

"You've got a lots of nerve," said the Poet. "Suppose some of these take offence at what you are saying about them, then what?"

"I don't care if they do take offense," said the Peasant. "In fact, I rather hope that they do get mad and anyone else who has loved ones buried in some cemetery and are forgetting them and allowing their places of final abode to become an eye sore to the general public. Then maybe they will clean up a little bit."

"That will be just fine if they react in that manner," said the Poet, "but suppose they decide to look you up and show you physically what they think of what you have had to say?"

"You mean suppose they decide to beat me up, don't you?" said Peasant. "Well I am ready for it."
