Extravagance Cause for our Troubles

As high as taxes have been and now are, it is to be admitted that we have more to show for our tax money than any we have spent during the past ten

Our roads, our schools, and our public buildings are all much improved. But our houses have not been painted, our ditches have neither been deepened or cleared of bushes. Our fences have gone down. We have increased our mortgage debts; we have spent our surplus cash, and now about the only thing we have to show for the money we once had (excepting our tax money) is an old rusty automobile or two in the back yard, which cost us more than all the taxes

We do not object to automobiles; we are for tax reduction and against governmental waste. We are for truth, however, and don't care to hear all the blame for our present-day ills charged to the other fellow. Our own waste and extravagance should be considered, for therein lies the greatest cause for our

Causes for Otto Wood's Career

Nell Battle Lewis, columnist for the News & Observer, in the life sketch of Otto Wood, gives the causes for his criminal career.

His widowed mother took up with another man.

He made his home with a group of West Virginia moonshiners where his brain was thoroughly saturated with lawless and murderous talk. At no time in life was he taught to subdue his passions. His first penitentiary term was served in a Virginia prison for seduction. He was married at one time, but his wife divorced him. He married again and when imprisoned a second time, his second wife divorced him. Upon leaving the penitentiary a second time, he did not go to the expense of marrying; he just took a woman along without ceremony. He stole; he robbed; he killed, he broke out of penitentaries of three states

At the age of 35 years he was shot and killed, leaving two widows and "a woman". Tow of the three women have a child each; the other has two.

Wood's greatest joy in life apparently came when he broke the law. An unfaithful mother, moonshining experience and bad company made a bad man.

Postponing Revaluation Work

The question of revaluing property has been discussed at length, from mountain to the sea, during recent weeks, and it is hard to say just what procedure is the best to follow. Last week, the State Legislature passed an act postponing the revaluation work until the middle of March or April, 1931.

The method of quadrennial assessments which has been followed so long has become a fixed habit, and is, perhaps, a good plan. However, it might be wise not to adhere strictly to the plan at all times. So far as tax saving is concerned, if incomes and fortunes now escaping tax to a large extent can be brought in the proper link and made to carry their share of the burden, land will feel a freedom that will not concern the owners so much about the assessment.

A new assessment will doubtless leave things just as much out of balance as they are now and result in a considerable money cost.

Hope Lies in a Limited Acreage

Will farmers rush to the money crop side of farming this year is still a question that should be given careful study and sober thought. While it would seem that the great loss suffered by the farmer in producing cotton and tobacco during the past two years would cause them to limit their acreage, it is whispered around that the tobacco growers are going in strong for a big crop this year.

Coming down to the individual books of each farmer in this county for last year, it is conceded that there was a net loss on the tobacco produced. Many farmers say if they had rested the days they labored in the tobacco field, kept the money they paid for fertilizer, tobacco cloth, wood cutting and the many other necessities connected with raising and harvesting the crop, they would have more money today than

The question now is, Are we going to try the game over again with a big supply of tobacco on hand and with conditions less favorable for normal purchases

It naturally looks as if the tobacco farmer has about the same chance to get rich by planting a big acreage to tobacco as a boy has in pulling the lever to a slot machine that is designed and set to rob

The easiest way to make money growing tobacco this year will be found in a limited acreage and good
