Our Most Important Task

We have heard lots of talk about confidence recently, and nearly always the talk placed the emphasis in the wrong place.

We were taught to think that wealth was afraid to invest because of the attitude of the people generally, which is entirely wrong. The truth is that wealth has acted in such a manner that would give general business a panicky feeling, and then it would jump on them and rob them.

This has been fully proven by recent investigations of the very people and institutions that have been paraded before the public as business builders and financial saviors, when, in fact, they have never been higher in the scale of business or citizenship than thieves and robbers.

Just ask the millions who have been caught by them. They have dominated Washington and perpetrated their games of robbery from coast to coast.

The big and most important task before the country today is to break up the big combines and monopolies, and especially futures-gambling dens as well as most of the stock exchanges. No gambling is honest and it is always detrimental to honest dealings in a community.

A Step in the Right Direction

Some folks are complaining and saying that President Roosevelt is assuming the role of a dictator. There is not a word of truth about it. He has done nothing but his duty; that is, kicked the big dogs off

It was a good deed, Mr. Roosevelt. If they don't like it and don't stop growling, kick 'em again. They certainly needed all they got.

No nation of people in all the world's history has been choked and smothere so badly by dishonest methods of capital as we Americans.

The President should now go a step further and destroy the methods by which they wrought these Crush the combines and trusts.

Must the Camel Go?

According to the claims of a young lady of a foreign land, her picture is to displace the camel on the cigarette packages. It seems, she claims, that two young North Carolinians who were traveling in her country, trying to teach her to smoke, among other things, made the promise.

While we have no interest in cigarettes, we admit that we do not like the looks of the camel as well as we would the picture of a good-looking woman, although the camel may be more in place there.

Suppose this brazenry goes on-it will only be a matter of a short time before some woman will butt we bull off of the Durham factories.

Trucks on the Highway

Chapel Hill Weekly.

Miss Linder, Congressman Frank Hancock's secretary, was killed a few days ago in Virginia in a collision between a truck and the automobile in which

The driver of a truck was killed in a collision with a passenger automobile last Friday near Raleigh.

These two incidents are merely part of a long record of slaughter. More and more frequently fatal accidents of this sort are chronicled in the newspapers.

The number of trucks has multiplied rapidly, their size has increased, and they move at high speed. Formerly they were in single units. Now "trailers" are hitched on, and we have what are in effect freight trains tearing along the highways at 40 or 50 miles

State governments have been shamefully negligent in allowing such a condition to develop.

The driver of a passenger car is constantly faced by these monsters. With their wide overhang, they give him barely enough space for passing. It is no woner collisions occur; the wonder is that they are not more common than they are.

It is not always, of course, that the fault lies with the driver of the truck. Sometimes the crash is due to the failure of the other driver to keep far enough to the right. But this does not alter the fact that he use of he highways by these enormous vehicles is a menace to life. One-hundred-per-cent hair-line performance is too much to demand of the drivers of passenger cars; they ought to have a little margin of safety. The veering of an inch or two ought not to be punished by death.

Trucks on the highways have come to be more than a nuisance. They are a curse of the first magnitude.

A Job for the Government

If things are to be done on a big scale, the government must do it. It can not be done byindividuals or combinations. Russia is beating us two to one in handling things, all because the government protects the weak and curbs the strong.

Railroad combinations very largely dominated the country for a quarter of a century. They spent money wastefully, built where they were not needed, competed with each other at heavy expense, paid dozens of men more salaries than the President of the United States ever got, gobbled up many millions of acres of America's best public lands. And now they are begging the government to save them.

The fact is private ownership, with superior government privileges, proved a boomerang. Their greed caused them to plan and build unwisely.

The railroads offer only one illustration of the action taken by many other trusts. They built too extensively. The basis of the whole load-the needs of the public-could not stand the high salaries paid and interest and dividends on the watered stock.

The question has been raised as to whether the government should attempt to put over its farm relief plan. It will certainly be better for the government to rescue and stand by the farmer than it will be leave him alone to the merciless speculator and gambler, who have already bankrupted him.

If our present-day civilization is to continue, it must rest itself on principles higher than government by Rich men are fully entitled to honest government and fair play. On the other hand, the poor man is equally entitled to a voice in everything, just as much so as teh rich. For we must remember that there has never been a rich man who did not gather his riches from the poor. Of course, it may be honestly done. But he must not get above the source of his income, nor forget those who created his wealth.

Under the Beacon Light

This issue of the Roanoke Beacon is dedicated to Rev. Roy Respass, who takes an interest in the young folk by identifying himself with every purpose that would aid the advancement of the future citizenship by making himself available to them in bettering their condition-socially, physically, spiritually-thus clinching the friendship of the young men and women.

A significant demonstration of his efforts in this behalf was when he so graciously entered into the nethusiasm of the dinner given at his home recently in honor of the seniors of the Creswell High School. And daily in his tasks he includes the young folk in his plans for the advancement of the churches which he serves and thus daily brings them to himself closer.

Not only that, but this minister has spunk. He has it to such a degree that he went about himself to secure the needed aid for entering and continuing in the Johnson Bible College, at Knoxville, Tenn.; Eugene Bible University, Eugene, Oreg.; Colorado Bible College, Fort Collins, Colo., where he prepared himseif for the ministry.

Again, this minister is not afraid of work. It takes work to serve a charge comprising four churches and two mission points, thus enabling him monthly to reach upwards of 1,200 people inhis ministry. It took work for him to plan out for his church leaders the interior of the parsonage. It took work to grow poultry, cultivate a garden, and do handy work about

So the Beacon has this toast for a minister who has courage, a love for young people, and a willingness to work-"May the efforts of a conscientious young minister be crowned with success in such a measure that it will add courage to a couragous young man and clinch the love of the young people to him, and aid him to truly be a servant to his charge."

Luck had run against Billy Harrell, son of Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Harrell, in Creswell, on a certain day. Usually a good marble shot, he had lost his prizes in the ring. Disconsolate, he told his dad at noon about his misfortune.

That evening he showed the parent the result of an inventive mind. He had plenty of marbles. He put a hole on top of a box large enough for marble to go through, but in the bottom he made the hole a fraction smaller. If boys dropped marbles through the box they won, and if they did not he won.

He couldn't lose, and he found many boys with marbles to take a chance.

A minister was at the home for dinner. The two boys had already been advised of their behavior. They were to eat mannerly and talk little. So everything went well for a time. And then just before dessert the minister remarked "what a nice boy was Whereupon Rex replied, "Yes, sir; but he will cuss you out if you bother him." And the hopes for a good impression on the clergyman by the two boys went a-glimmering as Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Paramore rushed the children out to play.

Under the glare of the Beacon light: James W. Norman seldom wears a hat . . . J. O. Everett is a good checker player . . . The young Owens couple have moved into their new home on Adams Street Mrs. B. G. Campbell enjoys bridge . . . Did Salesman Sam Waters ever choose you as a prospective victim? . . . Lud McNair is a favorite with the folk seeking Federal relief aid from the local distributing agency . . . Joe Cherry resembles the cartoonist's character, Hambone . . . T. C. Burgess is fidgety . . . Last week puzzle answers next week . . . Magnetic personalities: Mrs. Steward Woodley, Dr. W. H. Harrell, Mrs. Roy Respass.
