Vote For Continuation

Next to the reverence of the Almighty is the duty of the Southern farmer to support the Bankhead Cotton Acat and the Kerr-Smith Tobacco Control Act at the polls Friday of this week. Upon these two acts depends the farmer's welfare and that of his wife and children, and their failure will no doubt result in nearstarvation, loss of home and farm sooner or later.

Of all the acts earnestly advanced to relieve the plight of the farmer, the two up for consideration this Friday are the most important. The farmer will register his opinion, and his alone, on the great issues designed to protect his interests along with that of other industries.

We think and fair-minded farmer or business man will agree that, on the whole, farmers in 1933 and in this year are far better off than they were in 1931 and 1932. In those years we had a large acreage and a large production of cotton and tobacco.

We are not trying to tell farmers how to vote on the Bankhead or Kerr-Smith Acts coming up for a vote this Friday. But they should weigh carefully the benefits they are now receiving against the days when they produced unlimited quantities of cotton and tobacco and sold at starvation prices.

Proof Supports Success of New Deal

There are hundreds of definite proofs that the New Deal is succeeding. First of all was the great vote given it by the people who have been benefited by it. Second is the uncompromising hatred the fellows who caused the depression and starvation have for it.

Those two reasons would be sufficient to prove the case. Since life and property are the two big issues in government, we see at last and for one time in our own country life put first and property last in values, and that is exactly the point upon which the New Deal has won. Those many fellows who have been gradually pushed down the hill until they grew ragged and hungry have felt the touch of sympathy and mercy. They are for the New Deal.

On the other hand, the fablously wealthy have found the channels through which they have formerly sucked to themselves large profits from the worker and producers for ages blocked by the New Deal and they are against it.

Going further in the operation of the New Deal, we find the farmer getting more for his cotton, corn, hogs, cattle and wheat, while the bondholder gets less interest and the stockholder gets smaller dividends which is the only way prosperity and happiness will return in this country.

Aggregations of wealth must not depress fair profits of individuals.

A Verdict We Don't Like

Juries do many things. Sometimes they render just verdicts, and very often they render very unjust verdicts

Personally, we differ from the Insull verdict. We do not know just how much light the members of the jury had before them, nor how much power behind them, but we still do not like the verdict.

Consider the Fcts First

In appealing to home folks to do their buying at home, local merchants are not asking any one to do so at a loss; all they ask is a consideration of facts and an opportunity to serve you.

Only recently, a resident of a nearby community ordered a package from a northern firm, fully convinced in her own way that she was effecting a 40-cent saving. She had compared prices, and that, in her estimation, was all there was to the transaction. She compared the real article with a picture in the sales leaflet, the picture showing up better than the real article. The order was entered. When the package arrived, the apparent profit of 40 cents was wiped out and 18 cents over by a carrying charge of 58 cents. She also found that the glowing description in the sales leaflet, while not misrepresentative, was powerful in its appeal to the extent she thought she was getting a bargain when in reality she got an article hardly as good as the one she inspected on the local store

There is a practice among some to forget the part the home merchant plays in the life of the community in which he lives. He is called upon to support the church, the school, the civic organization, this society and that society, this thing and that thing, all worthy calls, to be sure, and he answers with little or no complaint. In fact, in past years, local merchants, have willingly and gladly answered such calls. When one considers these facts, the home merchant is found to deserve the first consideration when an article is to be

The home merchants goes to market with every available dollar to buy goods, and he does so without the assurance that all will be sold. He does so willingly, however, with the hope of pleasing a customer and with a hope, often far removed, of making a small and fair profit. He brings the goods to you for your inspection. He pays the freight. He makes necessary adjustments, and he serves you personally.

Local merchants are buying heavily for the Christmas business this year with the hope that you will give them an opportunity to offer their services in filling your Christmas shopping needs.

Be Sure To Vote Friday

Fifty-seven percent of the people of the United States are farmers. Last year they got only eight percent of the national income. This year, under the tobacco and cotton control acts they are getting 12 percent of the national income.

This means that both landlord and tenant, and you and your neighbor should vote to continue the government's efforts to help you.

Farmers, don't forget or let your neighbor overlook voting Friday December 14th on the two all im-

Government Changes Wage Scale

The best way to handle idlers is one of our big problems today. During the campaign of working the idle people, our government has paid prices very much higher than employers could pay in many sections which proved very pleasing to those actually in need, but it went further by inducing too many people to rush to the employment offices and quit such jobs as they had. The high prices paid by the government naturally gave government workers twice as much leisure as the farmers and other workers had in the community, and the results occasioned much dissatisfaction on the ground that it was not fair for the man who feeds himself to have to work twice as much as the man who the government feeds.

Now the error is to be corrected by paying the man who works on a government job the same price per hour as the other laboroer of the community gets. This rule will have a tendency to make the easy job, high pay worker seek a job for himself, and it is doubtless the surest way to give men self reliance. There are already too many folks not half trying to earn a living, a thing they will never do until they find it absolute necessary. With the big cut in the wage scale from that paid last season, men will necessarily have to do more and they will certainly be bet-

No man is entitled to eat on the public until he has exhausted his own power to feed himself. When he has done that no body will complain when he goes to seek aid from the government.

Feeding men to loaf is a mistake, and the government is to be commended for paying him less and working him more.
