Winter Hays Grown As Cover Crops Will Provide Good Feed

Also Protect Land From Erosion and Leaching During Winter

Winter hays, grown as a cover crop, provide a good feed for cattle during the following spring and summer.

Moreover, a good supply of winter-grown hay will keep dairymen from running out of roughage when dry weather cuts short the summer hay crops, says John Arey, extension dairyman at State College.

It has been found in experiments that when cows are fed liberally on good roughage and one-half a normal grain ration, milk production is only about 10 per cent lower than when a full grain allowance is fed, Arey pointed out.

Since roughage is so much cheaper than grain, he added, the dairyman can save more on his feed costs by feeding roughage than he will lose by the slight decrease in milk production.

Another advantage in winter hays is the fact that they can be grown between October and May, at a time when the land is not being used for cotton, tobacco, corn, or other summer crops.

A good hay crop will protect the land in winter by checking erosion and leaching, Arey added.

Mixtures of oats, barley, wheat, vetch, and winter peas will produce a better hay than either will when grown alone. The seeding date in North Carolina is from October 1 to 20.

Arey recommended the following seed mixtures for one acre: two bushels of Norton oats, one bushel of beardless barley, one-half bushel of purple straw or red-heart wheat, and 20 pounds of Austrian winter peas or 15 pounds of hairy vetch.

These varieties will mature at about the same time and give a yield of two to three tons of hay per acre when planted on good soil.

The best quality hay will be secured if it is cut while the cereals are in the milk stage.

Some light on the subject of Lamps!

TWENTY out of every hundred pupils in grade schools have impaired eyesight...and 40 out of every hundred graduates leave our colleges with defective vision. In many cases inadequate and improper light is a contributing cause.

One of the reasons why the Illuminating Engineering Society helped to develop the new I.E.S. Study Lamps and Floor Lamps was to insure that Better Light would do its part towards conserving vision. These lamps give more useful light than ordinary lamps, for eye-comfort and eye protection. I.E.S. Lamps are identified by the certificate tag illustrated at the right.

Floor Lamp $12.65 CASH

$13.05 on convenient monthly terms

A lamp which adequately combines your three light needs—general, but soft localized lighting necessary when close work is being done; a decreased light when more casual sitting is the order, and a still more diffused light which is so charming for the quiet after-dinner or music hour!

This scientifically designed lamp meets your decorative requirements as well as your sight requirements. Complete with "Three-lite" Mazda Lamp.

A Modern Study Lamp $5.85

$1 down—$1 monthly

Has the opal glass reflector bowl which helps to provide properly balanced lighting; attractive beige bronze finish or ivory enamel; parchment antique shade with scroll decoration. Approved by I. E. S.
