Worse Than Death

Reputations of principles and truth is worse than death. It is only 15 years since Germany signed a covenant not to enter the Rhineland with armed forces, which covenant she has fully repudiated within recent months.

When we look at the world upheaval, debts, and distresses caused by the great World War, the horror of which is fully attested by thousands of tombstones throughout Europe, Asia, and other parts of the world, we wonder what fools men can be. Yet when we see them get together in the spirit of their better selves and solemnly agree and covenant not to engage in any such horrid deeds any more and then see them deliberately violate their agreements, so soon, we must think the repudiation of their agreements a far greater crime than the actual slaughter already committed.

Germany's sole intention is at the first opportune moment to bear down on France and slaughter a million of her men, despoil her country and starve more of her women and children.

Turkeys seems determined to refortify the Dardanelles, where she slaughtered many thousand English, Australians and French, whose bodies lie buried in one of the world's great cemeteries on the European side of this notable waterway.

All these repudiations come because these merciless nations propose to kill more folks some day; yet the rank and file of the Turks and Germans do not want war. It is the rulers and grafters. Japan and Italy have both taken the view that the people of the world are so anxious for peace that they will stand by and let them go on slaying and killing Chinese and Ethiopians and avoid a general war.

The only thing needed was for the United States to enter the League of Nations in order to make the covenant safe and secure. Had we done the honorable thing, Japan would not have entered China, Italy would not be in Ethiopia, Germany would not have troops on the Rhine, and Turkey would not be preparing to kill along the Dardanelles. In addition, the world would have saved many billion in war expenditures.

It may be that since man has so little knowledge of how to save himself from the corrupt rules that God may have to rain storms of hailstones to kill a few Hitlers, Mussolinis, sultans, and American grafters and profiteers and destroy them, just as He did five kings on the Philistine plains in past centuries.

A Questionable Recommendation

In a hearing on confirmation of bids for Jefferson Standard Life Insurance Company stock owned by the United Commercial Bank, Judge J. Hoyle Sink made the statement that he could see no reason why the recommendation of the commissioner of banks, Gurney P. Hood, should be accepted, and the recommendation—which was for acceptance of the bid—was wholly and flatly rejected and denied.

The language used by the court would seem to indicate that there was either something wrong with the recommendation or that the judge was rather terse in his comments. The grounds of the court for rejecting the recommendation seemed to be based on the fact that the bid favored by the banking commissioner had been raised by a new bidder by $25 per share; which seemed to be a good reason and makes us wonder why Mr. Hood would recommend a thing that would take more than $3,000 from the bank's creditors, unless he was thinking of the interest of the old bidder rather than the interests of the bank's creditors and the new bidder.

Before and After

Angus Dhu McLean's speech over the radio in recent weeks presented the second part of a perfect parallel with the type of advertisements used in former years by patent-medicine manufacturers.

First, there used to be the picture of an emaciated, sickly looking man, woman, boy or girl, with the words "Before taking" under it; adjoining it would be the picture of the same person, robust, hale and hearty, with the words "After taking one bottle" underneath.

"Before taking" the Honored Angus D. McLean, while a legislator representing Beaufort County in the General Assembly of North Carolina, presented the true picture of a statesman, standing up and battling for the populace to receive an equal chance with others. Then, "After taking," standing before the microphone as A. D. McLean, Incorporated, he apparently represented the interests of tax-dodging wealth, while the downtrodden continue to struggle on, with yoke galls on their necks, and Mr. McLean sings no song of deliverance from their heavy loads.

While Mr. McLean cannot be criticized as a legislator, because he was true to his people when he represented them, the picture has changed mightily. Mr. McLean has taken a large dose of tax-dodging money, and he now has to be true to his corporations.

Good Seed Needed To Get High Corn Yield Tests Show

Average Corn Yield in This State About One-third What It Should Be

The 2,489,000 acres of corn harvested in North Carolina last year exceeded the combined acreage of cotton, tobacco and small grains. Corn is grown in every county of the State and on 91 percent of the farms, said Dr. G. K. Middleton, in charge of corn and small grain research for the N. C. Agricultural Experiment Station.

Yet the average corn yield per acre in the State is only 18 bushels, he said. A good farmer should secure yields three times this amount. In fact, he stated, yields of 95 to 100 bushels per acre have been produced in this State.

Good seed of a variety well adapted to the soil and climatic conditions of the farm is one of the most important factors in producing a heavy yield.

The importance of selecting a well suited variety may be illustrated by experiments conducted at the coastal plain branch experiment station at Willard. Latham's Double corn has produced a yield of 54.3 bushels per acre for the past six years. On similar fields at the experiment station, Reid's Yellow Dent produced only 37.2 bushels.
