Law Are Objects of Intensive Campaign

Bootleggers and Sellers of Whiskey By Drink Are Being Rounded Up

Vendors of small drinks and wholesale bootleggers alike in Wash ington County are feeling the strong arm of the law against them, as officers move to increase the business that ABC stores should get.

Chief of Police P. W. Brown, with his staff, are bringing them in from "nip joints" in town, while Federal officers are raiding them in the county and the work is beginning to count, but there are still many violators to be nabbed.

Sandy Williams, Nat Barnes, and J. C. Credle, notorious colored small time bootleggers have been nabbed here in town. Williams was fined $25 and costs, Barnes $35 and Credle received a stiff sentence.

Common Grades Are Higher; Reports Say In Handling Traffic Farmers Are Pleased

Good Quality Leaf and Big Breaks Features of Opening Sales

Considered slightly higher than they were last year, opening-day prices on Border Belt tobacco markets Tuesday brought cheer to thousands of growers who literally swamped the 16 markets with the golden leaf. An unofficial average for the markets combined approximated the 25-cent mark, people from this belt who visited the markets stating that farmers were well pleased and were encouraged over the prospects for the season.

One of the bright spots in the reports coming from the Border Belt was that prices for the medium and poorer quality tobaccos were much stronger, but there were still many sales made at 1, 2 and 3 cents a pounds. It was also pointed out that the prices do not compare with record peaks, but they were described as satisfactory, for the most part.

The Mullins market, largest in South Carolina, opened with an estimated 1,500,000 pounds on hand. Despite a heavy morning rain, large crowds attended the sales. Prices and officials estimated the day's average would be around $25.

At Lumberton the sales supervisor said prices for the day would average $24 to $26 a hundred, compared to opening day average last
