

Smart Poultryman Caters To Market

There are tricks in all trades, even in the poultry business says C. F. Parrish, poultryman of the State College Extension Service.

The smart poultryman sizes up his market, and then does his best to meet the consumer demand, Parrish said. For instance, the particular community in which he sells may prefer brown-shelled eggs. In that case, he would select a breed of chickens such as Rhode Island Reds or Barred Plymouth Rocks. On the other hand, if the community preferred white-shelled eggs, he would keep such breeds as White Leghorns or Minorcas.

Then there are tricks in controlling the inner quality of an egg. When chickens are turned on green grass, the yolks of the eggs may become extremely bright in color. Naturally, poultrymen selling on a market preferring light-colored yolks will have to make changes in the feeding program.

To lighten the yolks, Parrish advises taking yellow corn out of the flock's diet and substituting oats, barley or white corn. Then the amount of time the birds are on the grass should be limited. The effect of this change in diet will show up in the yolk color within a week.

Some markets are more interested in uniformity of yolk color than they are in particular shade of yellow. That is, Parrish explained, they want eggs all alike in yolk color, regardless of whether the color is light or somewhat dark.

The best way for the poultry man to get eggs with yolks of uniform color is to feed a well-balanced all-mash diet and keep the chickens off the grass range. However, instead of an all-mash diet, a poultryman can feed a grain mixture and laying mash, provided he uses a grain mixture that supplies about the same quality of coloring matter as does the mash.

Fertilizer Mixture For Tobacco Beds

Two hundred pounds of a 4-8-3 mixture for each 100 square yards of bed has proven most satisfactory for use on tobacco plant beds, say experts at State College. However, if a lower grade fertilizer is used, it can be supplemented with from 50 to 100 pounds of cottonseed meal, provided the meal is thoroughly mixed with the soil. All fertilizers should be broadcast on the bed and thoroughly mixed with the upper three or four inches of the soil. In preparing the bed, be sure that all roots and small stumps are removed and the soil broken up finely by using a disk harrow, coult, or some other suitable implement.
