Train Young Soldiers In Camps At Home

While entirely willing to support the President in what he does and is seeking to do to win the war, believing him in possession of more facts that enable him to judge better what should be done, the loyal citizen has the right to question the need for some of his actions. This is the land where freedom of thought, freedom of speech, freedom of the press is permitted; time for the contrary when it is ruled by a dictator—which should never be.

The President has asked Congress for permission to draft the boys 18 and 19 years of age and Congress is willing, the people are willing, the boys themselves seem to be more than willing, for at that age they seek adventure. But Congress wishes a restrictive clause requiring one year of training at home before being sent for duty overseas. This seems reasonable, for surely there are by now plenty of older men in the army, men already partly trained, many fully trained, for the overseas fields.

But the President objects to this restriction, he wants a free hand and a reasonably free hand he should have. Doubtless he has no intention of ordering the young soldiers to go overseas until they are sufficiently trained, yet wants the right to do so if it seems best to him. But in this instance the people appear to be in accord with Congress and their wishes should have some weight unless the contrary is necessary.

It may be, as has been rumored, that it is intended to release the older married men from the army or perhaps to assign them war work here. If this be a fact it can do no harm to say so openly. The people would then understand why the President wishes to be free of restrictions. The older married men in the armed forces should be partly trained by this time and it would be wasted effort not to use them where they could give service. Yet few of them, probably, would be very useful in necessary war work, or the production of materials for war, and they have been getting training in field duties. It would seem foolish to retire them and put others less well trained in their places.

The youth of 18 or 19 years may think himself a man, but he is yet a boy. At that age parents feel a peculiarly tender feeling for them. A year's training on home fields will carry them more quickly to a man's estate in sensing responsibility, fit them better for overseas duty if it is still required of them a year hence. Certainly they should have a year's training at home unless the President knows they are needed sooner elsewhere.

Following announcement that the House Committee on Small Business would "take the field" soon after the general election to study wartime industrial problems in the South, comes a further statement that will be of interest in North Carolina: Tyre C. Taylor has been named Special Counsel to the Committee.

Taylor is a native of Sparta in Allegheny County. He served former Governor O. M. Gardner as secretary and Executive Counsel, he founded the North Carolina Young Democrats and the Young Democra-

Master Sergeant and Mrs. S. B. man of his brother. He asks for the human heart. He will have it entirely to himself; he demands it unconditionally, and forthwith his demand is granted. Wonderful! In defiance of space and time the soul becomes an annexation to the empire of Christ. This phenomenon is unaccountable; it is altogether beyond man's creative powers. Time, the great destroyer, is powerless to extinguish the sacred flame; time can neither exhaust its strength nor put a limit to its range. I have often thought of it. This it which proves to me quite conclusively the divinity of Jesus Christ." —The New Illustrator.

Norman, of Kansas, visited his mother, Mrs. Paul Davenport, this week.

Miss Althea Mae Norman, of Currituck, spent a few days this week with her mother, Mrs. Paul Davenport.

The Rev. and Mrs. L. B. Bennett and Mrs. Stewart Woodley attended the Christian church convention in Washington this week.

Who Is Jesus?

Napoleon is said to have asked Count Montholon, "Can you tell me who Jesus Christ was?"

The Count declined to answer and Napoleon said, "Well, then I will tell you," and paid the following tribute to Jesus:

"Alexander, Caesar, Charlemagne, and I have founded great empires, but upon what did these creations of our genius depend? Upon force! Jesus alone founded His empire upon love, and to this very day millions would die for Him . . . I think I understand something of human nature, and I tell you these men were and I am a man. None else is like Him. Jesus Christ was more than a man . . . I have inspired multitudes with such a devotion that they would die for me, but to do this it was necessary that I should be visibly present, with the electric influences of my looks, or my words, of my voice. Christ alone has succeeded in so raising the mind of man toward the unseen that it becomes insensible to the barriers of time and space. Across a chasm of eighteen hundred years Jesus Christ makes a demand that is hard to satisfy. He asks that which a philosopher may often seek in vain at the hands of his friends, or a father of his children, or a bride of her spouse, or a

If you ever entertained a thought that ammunition used for target practice on army rifle ranges was holly wasted, you will have to change it. First efforts at Fort Knox, Ky., at combing rifle ranges for copper, nickel, lead and steel were so favorable that similar reclamation has been undertaken elsewhere and is said be proving equally successful.
