Spurred on by the highest prices for many years and by the urge to add materially to the national meat supplies in 1943, turkey growers are planning to go "all out" for the war program and for U. S. Department of Agriculture's goal of an increase of 15 per cent over the 1942 production, B. H. Bennett, of the Bureau of Agriculture Economics commented recently. "This," he said, "is indicated by the department's survey of turkey growers' production intentions, which reveal that growers are planning to start at least 12 per cent more poulters this year than last.
